METERING OF WELLS INEVITABLE, SUPERVISOR SAM FARR SAYS

Metering and registration of wells in Carmel Valley is inevitable. County and state officials made this prediction last week in response to the dispute over a plan that would require well owners in Carmel Valley to install meters and register their wells within six months. "Well metering is going to happen. We have to know the dynamics of our groundwater supplies," declared Supervisor Sam Farr. Page 20.

CARMEL HIGH BASKETBALL TEAM CONCLUDES OWN TOURNAMENT ON A WINNING NOTE

TRAFFIC AND FLOOD CONTROL PROBLEMS PLAGUE ODELLO DEVELOPMENT PROPOSAL

Increased traffic congestion along Highway 1 and the need for extensive river dikes are among the findings in the Environmental Impact Report released this month for the Odello family project proposed at the entrance of Carmel Valley. The EIR evaluates four alternative plans for the 134-acre agricultural parcel east of Highway 1 and south of the Carmel River. Proposed in the plans are a 200-unit hotel on 22 acres and 97 condominiums on 16 acres beside Highway 1. Sixty-eight acres would remain in agricultural use and 12 acres in riparian vegetation. Another 10 acres would be used for roads. Page 22.

SOLUTION SUGGESTED FOR CARMEL CENTER ROAD DISPUTE

The Monterey County Public Works Department has devised a novel solution to the road dispute surrounding the proposed expansion of the Carmel Center, but a final decision on the matter has been postponed until Jan. 15. Page 23.

CARMEL SANITARY DISTRICT TO APPEAL CREATION OF SPECIAL SANITATION DISTRICT

Charging that they were "slighted" and "run over," the board of directors of the Carmel Sanitary District decided last week to protest the decision by Monterey County to create a sanitation district in Carmel Valley. The ruffled directors voted 4-1 to appeal the decision of the county Local Agency Formation Commission to establish the Carmel Valley Sanitation District. The special district was approved Nov. 27 for the sole purpose of operating the $1 million private sewage treatment plant planned for the Carmel Valley Ranch development. Page 11.

CITY CLERK PAT O'HEARN RESIGNS

Patricia O'Hearn, Carmel city clerk for the past two years, was named to the same position at Monterey City Hall last week. She is the second Carmel city employee to resign this month. Building inspector Ron Warren resigned in early December. Miss O'Hearn, 39, and a Monterey resident, will work for Carmel through Jan. 4. She assumes new duties in Monterey on Jan. 7. Page 4.

CALM BEFORE THE STORM: Christ England wets his shoes to retrieve a drowning ball at River School while Sabine Grinstein (left) and Erin Giddons look on during the final days of school before Christmas vacation. A few days later, Sunday, Dec. 23, gale force winds and heavy rains pummeled the Carmel area, downing trees and causing power outages for Carmel residents during the holidays. Joe Cowan, district manager of Pacific Gas and Electric Company, said winds clocked at up to 60 mph "wreaked havoc with lines and poles." Some homes had power restored to them after two hours. However, Cowan said that there were many areas which were still blacked out as of Wednesday morning though PG&E crews were working round-the-clock to restore power.

THE YEAR IN REVIEW

JANUARY

The Monterey County Planning Commission approved the Carmel Valley Ranch tentative subdivision map and use permits; the board of directors of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association was "almost certain" to appeal.

Renting a house in Carmel for less than a month would become slightly more illegal under a new ordinance recommended by the planning commission.

The first rumblings about resident involvement in the annexation question were heard in the land. The ball was thrown back to LAFCO for reconsideration of that agency's decision to leave Carmel Point and Mission Fields out of the annexation picture.

Ron Warren became a casualty in the opening rounds of the war between the City Council and the City Administrator. Appointed to the post of chief building inspector one week, Warren himself requested the next week that his appointment be deferred. City Administrator Jack Collins' appointment of Warren was seen by the City Council as a deliberate attempt to thwart the council's efforts to reorganize the building department. The council took off from that point and threatened to deprive Collins of his power to hire and fire city department heads.

An ad hoc committee is studying an ordinance to stop conversion of downtown apartments for retail store use.

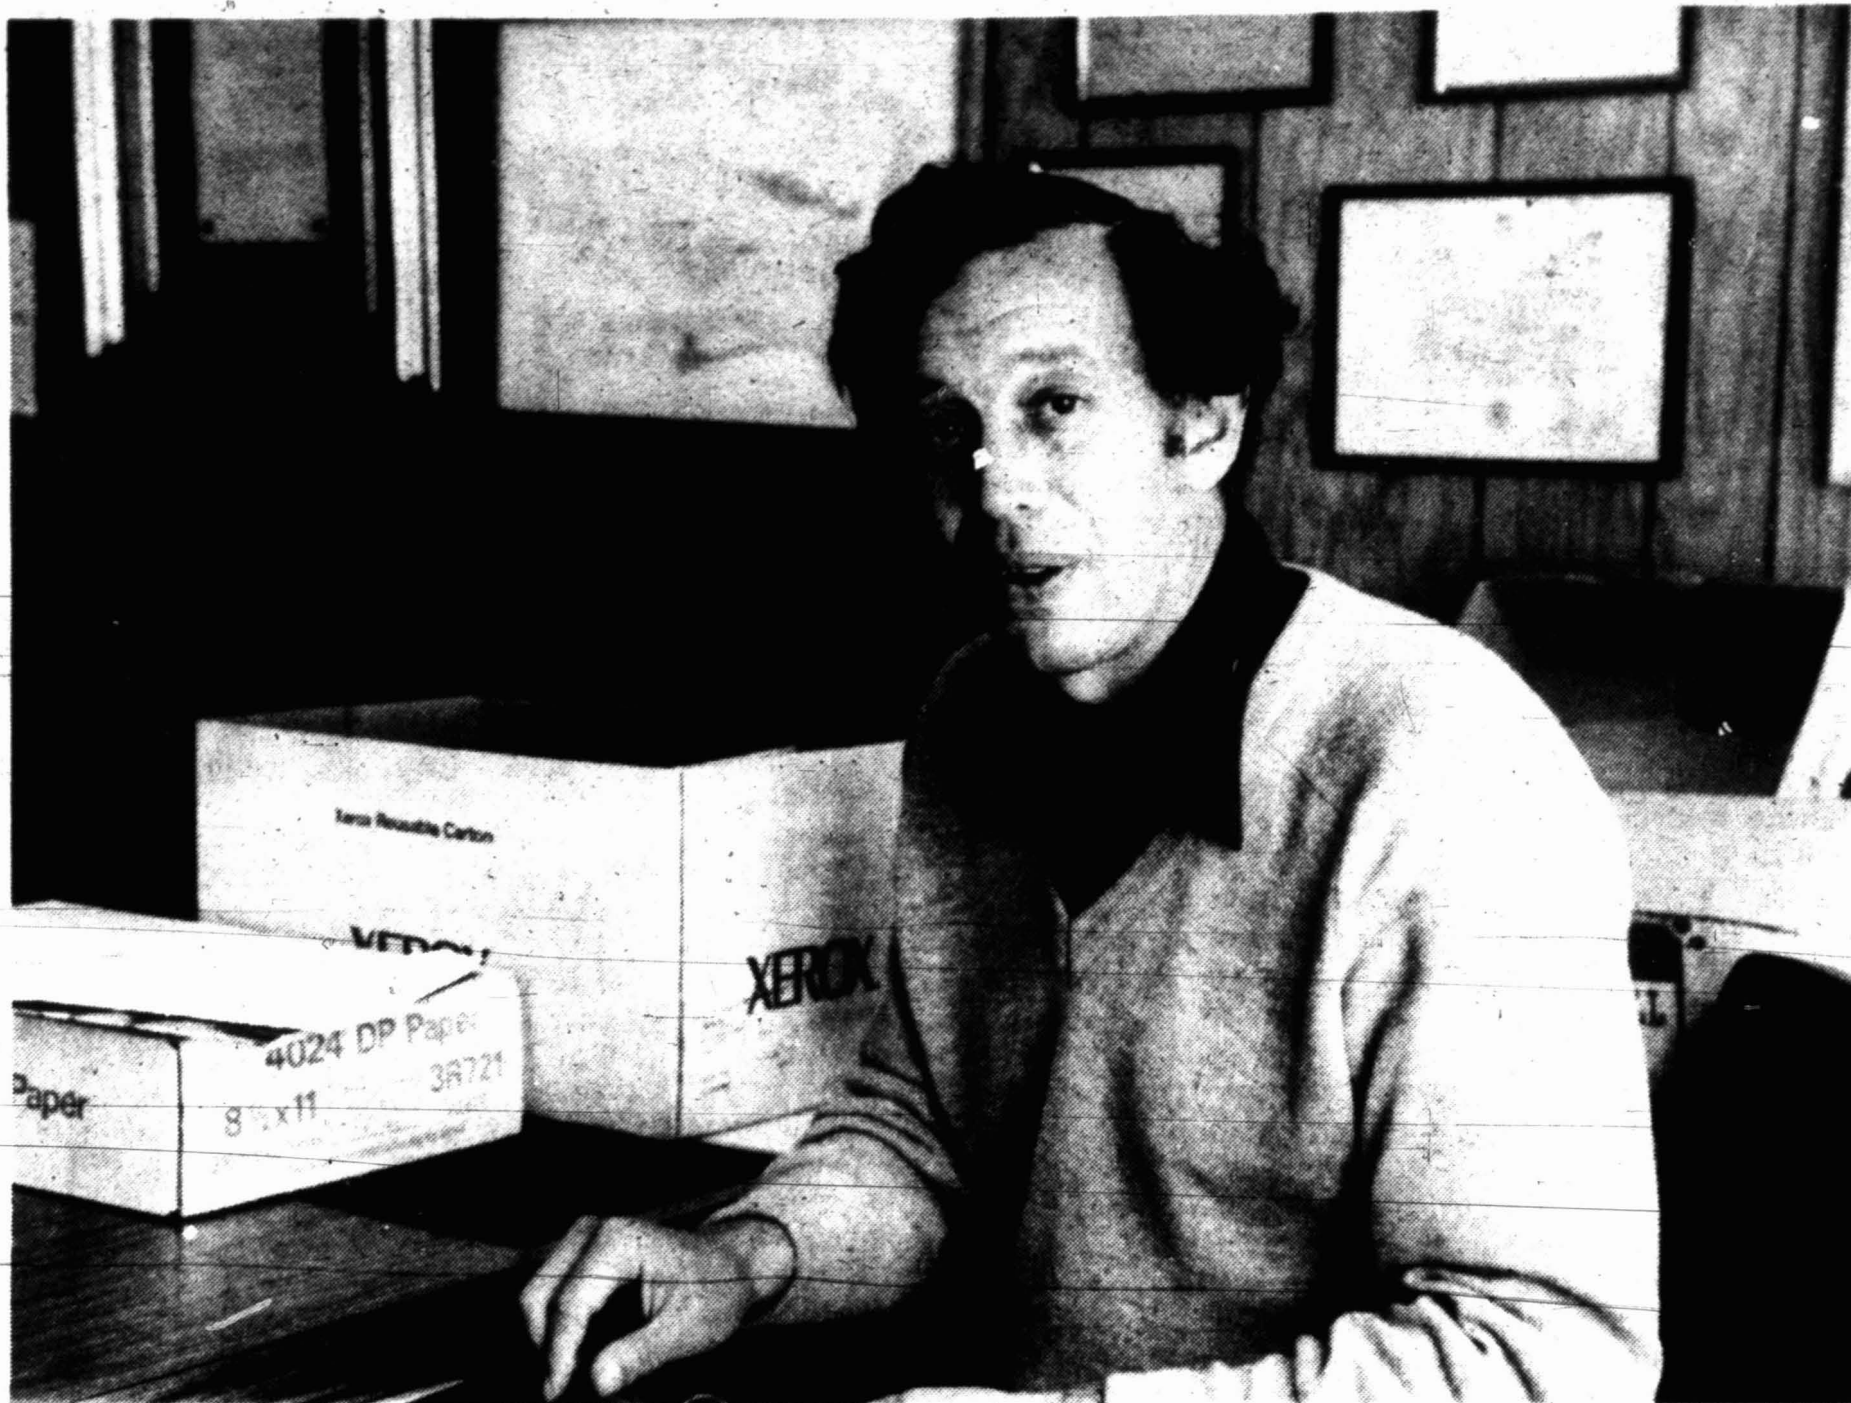

A structural engineer was finally chosen to design the long-awaited repair of the storm-damaged seawall near 13th and Scenic. Actual repair work was not expected to begin until spring.

The City Council, for once unanimous, approved the final reading of a "temperance ordinance" that clamps a lid on new cocktail-serving restaurants in Carmel. The new law was seen as another round in the contest between business growth and residential use.

The Carmel Sanitary District board of directors endorsed a reclamation proposal to use treated wastewater to irrigate golf courses in the Del Monte Forest. The proposal was forwarded to the State Water Resources Control Board.

After years of discussing sale or subdivision of the eastern 134 acres of their land, the Odello family presented a Specific Plan for development of the property to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. Three major environmental hurdles were seen: water, sewage disposal and traffic problems.

What's in a name? A regional postal official reported resolution of the dispute about the name of the new post office, under construction. The latter will be "United States and memorabilia, the Seattle-bound Collins retained his sense of humor long enough to point out an item he'd left behind—a photo of a jet plane with the caption: "The fastest solution to local government problems—leave town."

Post Office Carmel, Calif. 93923." The city's original post office will have a new sign reading "United States Post Office Carmel-by-the-Sea, Calif. 93921."

The name of a new literary quarterly also stirred up some interest when the publication of the first issue of Dideann was announced. The word is Gaelic and the magazine's publishers selected it to emphasize Carmel—and the magazine of local fiction and poetry—as a refuge or haven.

The second annual Festival of Firsts Playwriting Contest produced a record number of entries: 194 plays.

Carmel's dogs had their day when the City Council once again said "no" to a residential leash law. Violation of a Carmel tradition and enforcement costs were cited as equally important reasons for the council vote.

FEBRUARY

City Administrator Jack Collins was at the center of heated controversy relating to the power and scope of his office. Joining the imbroglio were the City Council, Planning

'Farr's not unfair'

Dear Editor:

I am writing to take strong exception to the Dec. 6 editorial which attacked Supervisor Sam Farr's endorsement of the Carmel Valley Ranch within the Carmel Valley Master Plan. The editorial infers that Sam Farr alone supports the controlled growth of the Ranch within the Master Plan.

First, it was the Master Plan Study Committee, a hard-working volunteer advisory group, who first approved 500 units at the Carmel Valley Ranch. The fact that this group of non-partisan residents agreed with Sam Farr supports, not detracts, from the even-handed and non-partisan approach taken by Mr. Farr.

Second, the planning commission, after long months of study, analysis and debate, also approved the Carmel Valley Ranch development. The fact that this group of non-partisan planners agreed with Sam Farr again supports, not detracts, from Mr. Farr's vote.

Third, the editorial attempts to portray Sam Farr as a despoiler, rather than preserver, of this beautiful county. How soon one forgets that Mr. Farr initiated public acquisition of the Doud Ranch, Little Sur River property and East Molera Ranch. How soon one forgets that Mr. Farr dedicated Jacks Peak Park and Garland Park. How soon one forgets that Sam Farr has opposed the Marriott and Odello development proposals.

One does not have to agree with every single vote of Sam Farr to appreciate that he has balanced the preservation of the county's beauty without being unfair to well-planned property management.

'Please help us'

Dear Editor:

My sincere thanks go to the Monterey Planning Commission for refusing a change of use permit to the Monterey County Housing Authority last Wednesday.

Over 1,000 concerned citizens also supported our drive to make Rippling River a training facility for handicapped citizens.

The Tri-County Steering Committee worked long and hard on the plans it submitted, and now Supervisor Sam Farr and Congressman Panetta have them.

Please continue your support and let Panetta and Farr know you want Rippling River turned into a facility to aid people who have to learn to walk, talk, dress themselves and cook for themselves before they again go into the mainstream of life. So many accident victims have no place to go for this training.

Elder citizens and other handicapped people can use the training, also.

Please help us in our struggle for Rippling River—who knows, you may just have a hand in making a pilot project right here in Carmel Valley.

Almost like a City of Hope, isn't it?

Support appreciated

Dear Editor:

We, the residents of Rippling River in Carmel Valley, wish to express our appreciation for all the support given us in our struggle to keep the Monterey County Housing Authority from taking our home away from us.

Our heartfelt "thank you" goes to the Tri-County Steering Committee for the wonderful plans it submitted to the planning department and finally, God bless the Monterey County Planning Commission for turning down the use permit to allow the housing authority to change Rippling River into apartment complex for the elderly who could live anywhere.

Congressman Panetta and Supervisor Sam Farr now have the Rippling River plan in their hands.

R.R. could be a truly beautiful rehabilitation center for handicapped people—to prepare them for a useful life as a workable citizen on their own.

Please continue to support us. Let Congressman Panetta and Supervisor Sam Farr know how you feel.

Barbara Sanford, moderator Paul Marto, George Kew, Ken White and Ron Parravano. White, Sanford, Clayton and Parravano were elected in the Nov. 6 election. Wilsdon lost his bid for a fourth consecutive term. In the sanitary district race, incumbents Charlotte Hurst, Kenneth McGinnis and Ted Weller were re-elected.

Commission and the Carmel Citizens Committee.

Controversy over a 40-year-old law prohibiting live music in the business district swelled to a crescendo when a Carmel folk guitarist and more than a dozen Carmel restaurant owners and a city councilman joined a petition drive to overturn the ban. The movement lost its thrust and eventually died, pianissimo.

School Superintendent Carl Wilsey relayed to the board of education the troubling news that $600,000 would have to be pared from next year's budget as a result of Proposition 13. The cut would mean program cuts and teacher layoffs.

Business operators in upstairs locations in the Carmel business district came down to protest a new law under consideration that would ban their lofty pursuits.

A coalition of citizen groups and the city of Carmel filed a joint appeal challenging the county planning commission's approval of subdivision plans for Carmel Valley Ranch.

Nathaniel Crosby, the late Bing's 17-year-old son, hosted—and competed in—the 38th Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Golf Championship played at the Pebble Beach, Spyglass Hill and Cypress Point golf courses in Del Monte Forest. Lon Hinkle was the winner in a contest that included the likes of Telly Savalas, Peter Falk, James Garner, former President Ford, Jack Lemmon, Lawrence Welk, Clint Eastwood, Hank Ketcham, Willie Mays and Glen Campbell.

The lights went out and the people turned on as Carmel turned into a giant block party when PG&E power was interrupted for about two hours. Not a single burglary or serious crime was reported.

Carmel school district trustees sent layoff notices to more than 20 employees as a result of Prop. 13.

The city of Carmel budgeted $50,000 for culture, but critics maintained that theater, music and dance groups went begging while buildings that house cultural events received the lion's share of the funds.

"Shades of Tokyo," said the Carmel building inspector to a proposal to allow rickshaw-like "pedicabs" in the city. The proposal was the effort of a Merced businessman "testing the water" for his hooded tricycle taxi service. City officials punctured the plan before it got geared up any further.

Thirty thousand gallons of raw sewage were dumped in the Carmel River as a result of the Feb. 2 blackout. People were advised to stay out of the river and the Carmel River Lagoon until county health officials' inspection was complete.

A Carmel man used his head and his notepad to put the finger on two Salinas youths suspected of committing a rash of purse snatchings in the city. Tom Nash, 31, of Carmel, spotted a snatching and chased the suspect until the suspect jumped in a getaway car. Nash noted the license number and turned it over to the police department.

The Peninsula Players, a Carmel theater group for senior actors, discovered that the lure of the stage was the best tonic for staying young. The 26-member group staged Noel Coward's Hands Across the Sea at the Carmel Foundation and other Peninsula locations.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors ruled that developers of the Carmel Valley Ranch could proceed with construction of 140 units without proving the existence of an independent water source to serve the new residences. The 4-1 vote rejected an appeal endorsed by the city of Carmel, the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, and the Carmel Area Coalition challenging a use permit issued in January for the first phase of the project.

MARCH

Parents were saying "enough is enough" to cuts in school program and staff arising from Proposition 13. "It may take a march on Sacramento," said biology teacher Howard Sanborn, and more than 200 parents crowded into the Middle School library to ask the board to declare the cuts intolerable, and to demand more money from the state legislature.

Later an 18-member committee of parents, students, staff members and citizens was appointed to review budget cuts for the Carmel Unified School District made necessary by the passage of Proposition 13.

A law that would have controlled designs of all new and remodeled two-story Carmel homes was defeated by a 3-2 vote in front of a surprised audience at a Carmel City Council meeting.

Carmel honored its world-famous urban forest in its first annual Carmel Arbor Week, March 7-14.

After receiving 130 letters of protest, the Carmel Planning Commission relented on its tough stand against short-term rentals of homes in Carmel residential neighborhoods.

They call him the "Leonardo da Vinci of Carmel Valley" and turned out to seek Renaissance Man and inventor Alexander Weyger's new book at a special reception for him at the Thunderbird Book Store. Weyger's latest book was entitled The Recycling, Use and Repair of Tools.

The Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation took formal possession of Tor House and Hawk Tower with the presentation of a down payment to Donnan Call Jeffers, the poet's son.

Cartoonist Bill Bates moved back to Carmel after three years on the Pacific island of Fiji. He brought with him his new wife, Carole, whom he had met in Carmel while she was a city meter maid.

Walt Hinton, assistant superintendent for business services of the Carmel Unified School District, resigned to take a position with a Washington school district. Hinton, who had served the district for 13 years, was the third key member of the district business office to resign or be dismissed since the beginning of the year. Budget Director Don Slater resigned in February, and the district bookkeeper had recently been dismissed.

Planning commissioners sat with slack-jawed jaws as a succession of speakers told them that they had been ignoring the city's ban on renting Carmel homes for periods of less than 30 days.

March went out like a lion, and with spirits flying high at the 50th annual Carmel Kite Festival held at the athletic field of Carmel Middle School.

APRIL

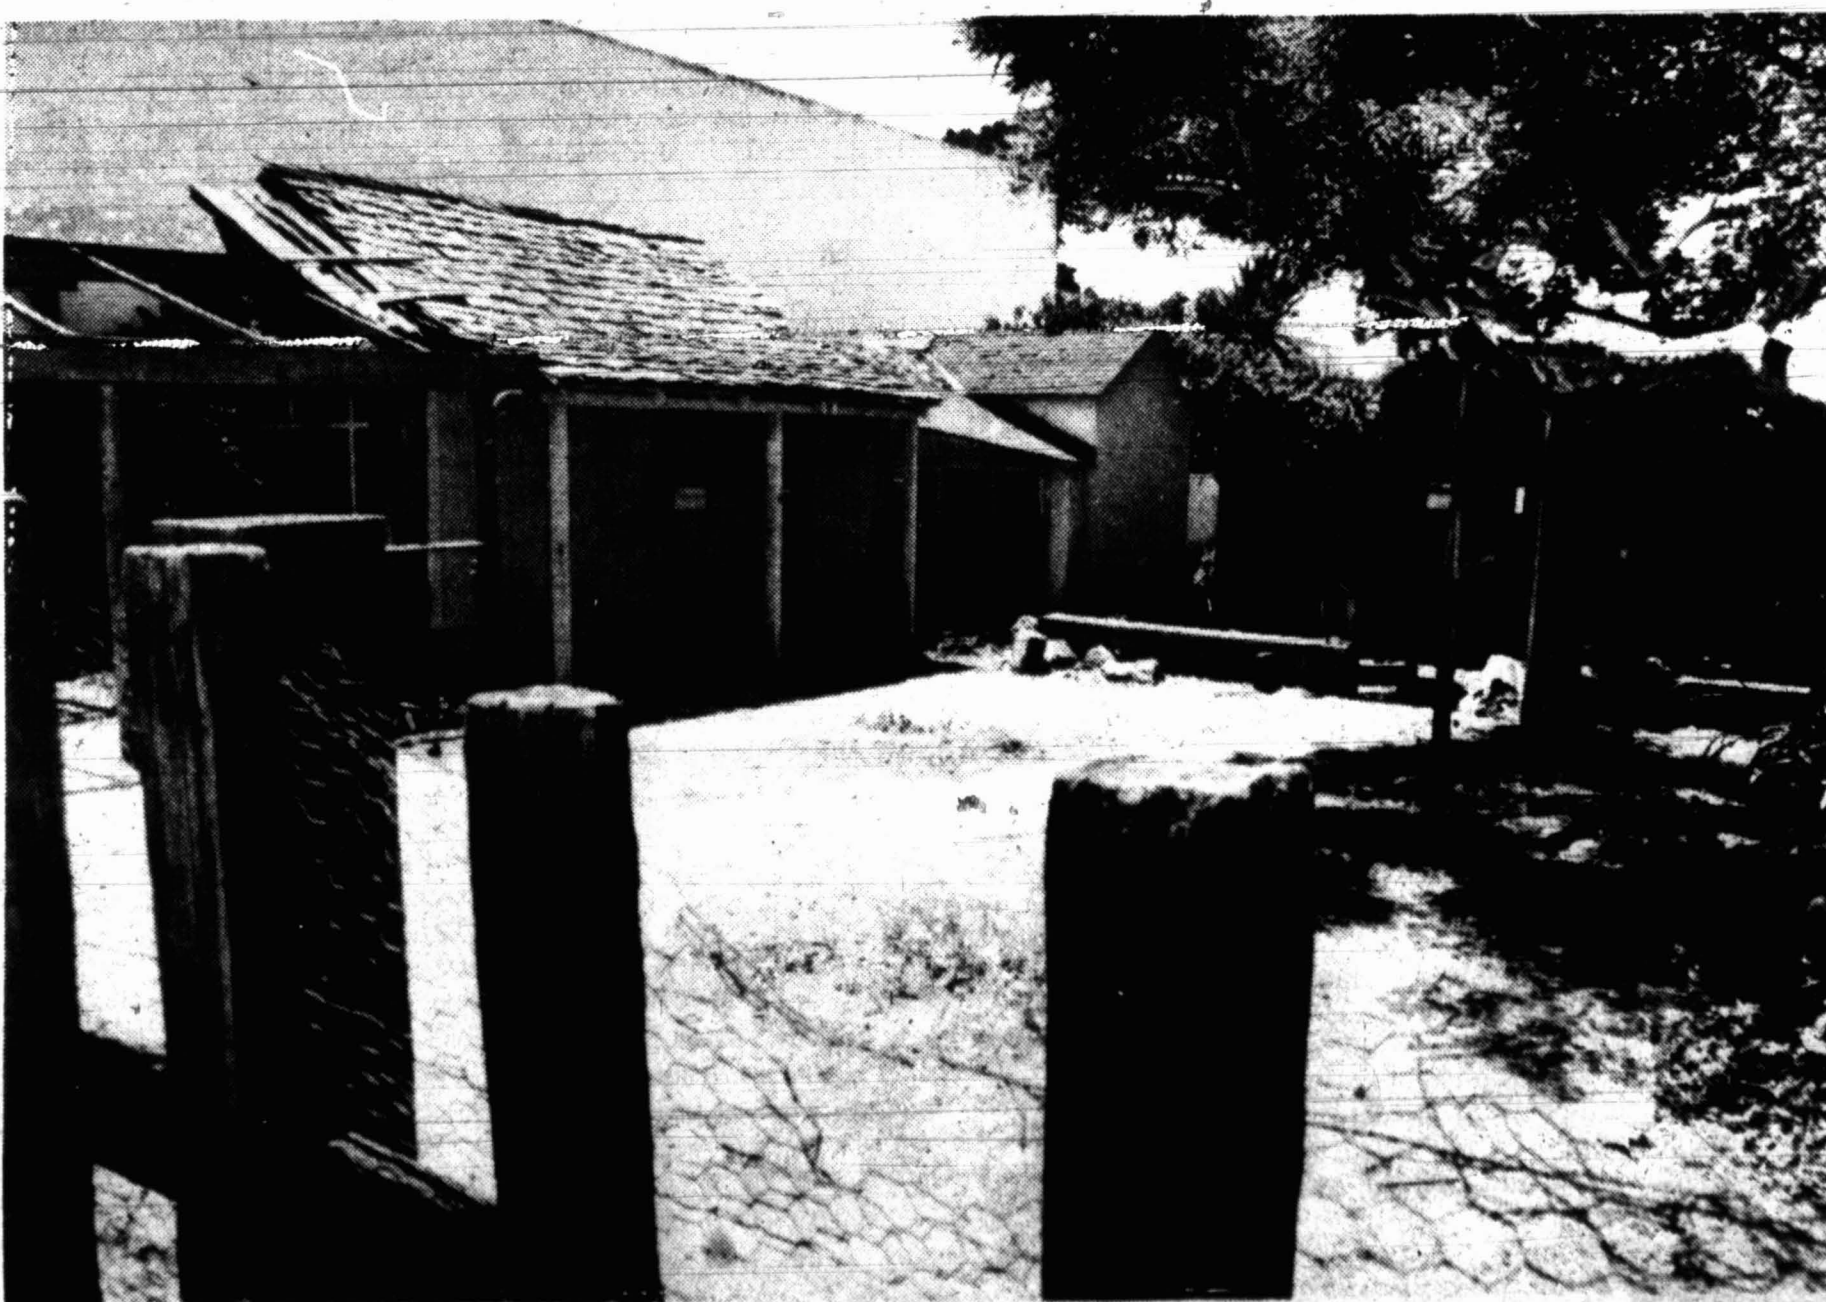

Carmel Middle School Principal Robert Hufford resigned to become superintendent of an elementary school district near Redding. Hufford had been at his Carmel post for four years.

A pet cemetery with burial plots for 1,500 animals was proposed for a 16-acre site just east of Carmel Valley Village. The proposal was buried by county zoning administrator Robert Slimmon.

A group of 29 seventh and eighth graders at Carmel Middle School visited historical and governmental sites in Washington, D.C., on a private tour chaperoned by school faculty members Donald Blakeman and Mike Parral.

A two and one-half acre per dwelling minimum proposal was adopted by the citizens' committee drafting the Carmel

THE CITY COUNCIL earlier this year moved to preserve as open space the former Piccadilly Nursery on the west side of Dolores between Seventh and Ocean. The council leased the site for 12 months to give it time to study the feasibility of purchasing the property. Residents of Carmel endorsed the council's endeavors. An advisory measure on the Nov. 6 ballot asked the electorate if the city should buy the site. Voters responded 801-624 in favor of purchasing the property.

The Village:

Poison to be used to clear sewer line--will it harm trees?

By STEVE HELLMAN

POISON FOAM MAY BE used to kill tree roots that have invaded and clogged a main sewer line in Carmel.

The Carmel Sanitary District plans to inject special chemical agents into the eight-inch Fourth Avenue sewer line between San Antonio and Monte Verde.

The operation is the cheapest solution—although its results are only temporary—to freeing the line that is plagued with leaky plastic joints and intruding roots from nearby eucalyptus trees, according to district manager Michael Zambory.

ZAMBORY TOLD THE board of directors at its meeting last week that the chemical foam, used successfully in other areas, would force the roots to recede from the line for three to five years.

Admitting that it was not as good as a permanent solution, Zambory said that clearing the 1,100-foot section of clay pipe with poison foam would cost $3,000, while replacing the line would cost the district at least $42,000.

He said that the $3,000 would also cover resealing the leaky plastic joints through a special method that does not require digging up the pipeline.

ZAMBORY EXPLAINED THAT he considered using the chemical solution when the district received bids of between $42,000 and $128,000 to replace the line. The district staff's estimate for the replacement was $26,000.

The root invasion resulted, he said, from very small cracks in the plastic sealer in the pipe's joints. He said the problem was common throughout 95 percent of the district's sewer lines in Carmel.

The poison foam, Zambory claimed, will not endanger the large eucalyptus trees. He said that the plan would be submitted to the city forester for review.

City Forest Greg D'Ambrosio is on vacation and was unavailable for comment.

BILL ASKEW, CITY superintendent of public works, said that he had received Zambory's information on the plan.

Askew said, "There shouldn't be any problem at all. Those are big eucalyptus trees and they're just finger roots in the sewer line. It (the poison) won't have that much effect on those big trees."

The sewer line is about 15 to 25 feet from the trees, Askew said. He said that his department, along with D'Ambrosio's, will further review the proposal. "We'll have to talk to them a poison chemical foam to kill the roots. The district hopes to repair the leaking joints in the line with sealing equipment to avoid digging up and replacing the sewer line.

ROOTS FROM EUCALYPTUS trees along Fourth Avenue in Carmel have infested a main sewer line causing backed-up drains. The Carmel Sanitary District is proposing to use a

City Hall loses another employee

City Clerk Pat O'Hearn resigns

PAT O'HEARN, Carmel's city clerk for the past two years, has resigned her post for a similar position in Monterey.

O'Hearn, 39, said the move was "a career advancement opportunity" and was not motivated by dissatisfaction or friction at City Hall.

She is the second City Hall employee to resign in recent weeks. Building Inspector Ron Warren resigned earlier this month.

She will begin her new job Jan. 7.

O'Hearn told the Pine Cone that she is expecting "longer hours and a bigger job" as Monterey City Clerk, but added that "promotion availabilities are much greater there."

O'HEARN, WHO has been doubling as planning commission secretary in addition to her normal duties, said, "It is not that I'm inundated with work and unable to keep up with it." O'Hearn admitted, however, that she was "looking forward to a perhaps more clearly defined area of responsibility" in her new job.

She said that the hardest part of the decision to leave the Carmel post was personal. "I grew very attached to the people here," she said. "We are a very close-knit group. There's always a lot of laughter as well as a lot of hard work here."

She said that her relations with Carmel City Administrator Doug Peterson are "very positive." She said she informed Peterson of the Monterey opportunity before she interviewed for it in order "not to jeopardize (Monterey City Manager) John Dunn's and Doug Peterson's professional relationship."

O'HEARN ADMITTED THAT the timing of her announcement was "extraordinary." Peterson is on vacation, and Warren recently announced his resignation.

"My resignation is in no way a reflection on Doug Peterson," O'Hearn said. "Because of the timing it probably looks like it is, like everybody's bailing out. But that's not it. It just isn't it at all."

She said her decision to "move upward" was rationally, rather than emotionally, based. She cited "exposure to a variety of activities and opportunities in city government" that doesn't exist in Carmel. She noted that the larger city, with 300 employees, is "a bigger operation" that better suits her background.

PRIOR TO HER CARMEL city clerk position, O'Hearn was executive assistant to the director of the San Francisco Housing Authority for four years. Before that, she worked as an assistant to an account executive in a San Francisco leasing firm. She lived in San Francisco for 15 years before moving to Monterey. O'Hearn has a bachelor's degree in humanities from Colorado State University.

Her salary will jump from $1,240 per month to $1,419 per month at her new job.

O'Hearn, whose final day at Carmel City Hall will be Jan. 4, said that the city will advertise for a new city clerk immediately. She said that she hopes to do some pre-screening of the applicants herself, and to prepare a list of recommended applicants for Peterson.

CITY CLERK PAT O'Hearn is the second City Hall employee to resign this month. She has accepted the city clerk post for Monterey. She will work for Carmel through Jan. 4 and assume her new duties on Jan. 7.

Will sewer line poison plan harm trees?

little more about it," he said.

ASKED IF THE FOAM would pose a pollution hazard when flushed through the sewer line, Zambory said that the poison will be "subject to dissolution."

"The most volatile acids can be diluted to nothing. We discharge two million gallons of effluent per day into the bay. The process of dispersion in the treatment plant is tremendous. "We're only killing the ends of the roots," he insisted.

The newly developed foam, he said, has been used in other areas, including Monterey.

Zambory said that in his 25 years of working for different cities and agencies he has not seen one tree killed by this kind of chemical process.

DIRECTOR TED WELLER questioned Zambory about the process, noting that eucalyptus trees are "sensitive and water seeking."

"What about lining the pipe with plastic?" Weller suggested. Weller, who is a sanitary engineer for the American Wine Institute, said that the city of Napa is relining all of its clay sewer lines with plastic.

Napa has the same root infestation problem with its older sewer lines, Weller said. Even small leaks are soon discovered by tree roots. Plastic lining prevents the leaks.

"Infiltration by roots is our worst enemy," he said. "But we're just buying time (with the chemical process). In three to five years we'll be back to the same problem, same lines, same roots."

"If we're going to do it, let's do it right, not a Band-Aid job," Weller said.

But district superintendent Wilce Martin told the directors that fitting the line with plastic lining would cost about $21,000 for materials alone.

ZAMBORY GAVE THE problem a new twist when he noted that the sewer line under Fourth Avenue is not that old. "It was put in only 10 years ago," he said. "We shouldn't have to spend enormous amounts to fix it."

Clay pipelines last 50 years, Zambory said.

He had contacted the contractor who installed the line, Granite Construction Company of Sand City. He was told the problem resulted when the PVC (poly-vinyl chloride) joint-seals had compressed and developed leaks. Different plastic materials were now being used in place of the PVC, Zambory said.

THE PROCESS THAT Zambory proposes for resealing the joints will begin with the injection of the chemical foam. The roots within the lines are killed, and recede several inches.

A small television scanner, the same unit that is used to inspect the root infestation, is pushed through the line. With it goes the sealing tool—a remote-controlled pair of thick rubber balloons that are inflated to isolate the leaking section.

A gelatinous material is pumped through hoses into the isolated section. The pumping is continued until the cracks in the joint and any cavity surrounding the pipe are filled with the gelatinous material. Workers can detect when the cavity is full because pressure equalizes in the pump hoses.

The whole process, Zambory said, is completed without digging up the sewer lines. He said that the remote television camera is so accurate that workers can detect hairline fissures in the PVC material.

In one reported instance, Zambory said, workers spotted a sewer rat with the camera and could see its whiskers.

Valley Master Plan.

Pay-as-you-go school busing was proposed to parents of Carmel Unified School District students. The proposal in which 55 percent of those parents surveyed wanted continued free busing was one of many to arise from Prop. 13 school funding cuts.

A committee appointed to study the problems caused by double-parked trucks in the Carmel business district came up empty handed. "We're not saying to forget the whole thing," said Councilman Howard Brunn, chairman of the committee, "But city staff has the energy and expertise that our little committee can't generate."

"We'll wind up without any boxes when the new post office opens," said Carmel postmaster Frank Ledesma. "The guy reneged on his contract to supply us 2,446 boxes."

Emergency commercial rent controls and a freeze on most Carmel business uses were voted unanimously by the Carmel City Council. The unprecedented actions were a response to the actions of a Carmel landlord who raised rents 500 percent and more for six Carmel tenants, including a dry cleaner, a tailor and an art school.

A 175-room resort hotel would be the only development on the 271-acre Rancho Canada Golf Course, according to vastly scaled-down plans for the development at the mouth of Carmel Valley. "We may have been a little too ambitious in the beginning," said golf course president Nick Lombardo.

An annual quota of 900 new homes would be allowed in the unincorporated areas of Monterey County, according to a proposal presented to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors by the Growth Management Task Force.

Marriott, the hotel chain, bowed out of the Rancho Canada Lodge development plans.

Actor Gene Hackman, who recently starred as Lex Luthor in the multi-million dollar movie, Superman, received permission from the Carmel Planning Commission to build a guest house on his Carmel Dunes area property.

MAY

Sunset Center hosted the Third Annual High School Orchestra Festival Saturday, May 5.

Community Hospital got a new $78,000 heart-monitoring machine which can provide constant electronic surveillance of 16 patients simultaneously.

Bay School, the little red schoolhouse on Highway 1, celebrated its 100th birthday on Saturday, May 12. Displays, a clown, puppet show, raffle, games and birthday cake were all part of the festivities for Carmel's first school, established in 1879.

"Pebble Beach is going to the dogs" is what they said when the Del Monte Kennel Club held its 54th annual dog show on the lawn at The Lodge at Pebble Beach, Sunday, May 13. The show, which attracted many of the nation's most elegant and obedient dogs, was dedicated to the memory of Samuel F. B. Morse, who founded the Del Monte Kennel Club.

The measure stemmed from a bitter dispute earlier this year when then-City Administrator Jack Collins resigned in the face of efforts by the City Council to trim his powers. The county board of supervisors slapped a four-month freeze on subdivisions and rezoning approvals in Carmel Valley on July 3. Major budget cuts were approved by the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education.

"Get a load of those crewcuts!" is what they said at Carmel High's 20-year reunion for the Class of '59. The dinner-dance, picnic and "jukin'" were carried on with nostalgic abandon in a party that included frolicking on Carmel Beach, and dancing at the La Playa Hotel.

Automobiles from an older, more elegant era filled Carmel streets and the grounds at Pebble Beach as the 29th annual Concours d'Elegance got underway on Sunday, August 19. The city of Carmel, Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and scores of residents opposed the plan for the hotel on the Rancho Canada Golf Course area. Is A Problem Drinker Destroying Your Marriage?

• Read Every Word

If a problem drinker is hurting you, you can be sure he's hurting himself too — or herself. Alcoholism does not respect sex, age or color. How long can you go on? If you're ready to do something about it, remember this... you can help the alcoholic even if he or she doesn't want help.

• What Not to Do

Don't accuse — he or she will never admit to drinking too much. Don't try to reason with the problem drinker. Alcohol abusers are seriously ill, and the illness affects the mind as well as the body.

• What You Can Do

The best thing (and really the only thing) you can do for problem drinkers is to get them to professional help. Fast. The CareUnit Program in your local hospital offers a unique program that works. Given the right environment and an effective treatment program, alcoholism is a treatable disease. We prove it every day. In a few weeks, the problem drinker can look forward to resuming a useful and productive place in society. And you can look forward to a happy, normal life once again.

• How to Begin

Begin by calling your local CareUnit immediately, and talk to a staff counselor. You alone can help the alcoholic. Call now and make an appointment to see a counselor. You needn't be hurt again.

William Long, the 58-year-old Wells Fargo parking lot attendant, filed a $60,000 claim against the City of Carmel as a result of a scuffle with police over his routing of traffic in front of the bank. "You'd think I'd robbed the bank," he said.

'We were slighted'--Carmel directors

CSD to appeal creation of special district

CHARGING THAT THEY were "slighted" and "run over," the board of directors of the Carmel Sanitary District decided last week to protest the decision by Monterey County to create a sanitation district in Carmel Valley.

The ruffled directors voted 4-1 to appeal the decision of the county Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO) to establish the Carmel Valley Sanitation District.

LAFCO approved the separate district on Nov. 27 for the sole purpose that it would operate the $1 million private sewage treatment plant planned for the Carmel Valley Ranch development.

State law requires that a public agency operate private sewage disposal facilities for developments of four units or more. Developers of Carmel Valley Ranch propose 500 condominium units, a 100-unit hotel and golf course.

THE CARMEL SANITARY District submitted an application to LAFCO in November to annex and service a large portion of Carmel Valley, including the Carmel Valley Ranch development.

The directors charged last week that LAFCO "ignored" their application when it approved the separate sanitation district to avoid a possible one-year delay of construction of the private disposal facility.

Director Ken McGinnis, in a rare show of anger, declared: "After all our work, to be pre-empted in this way. They (the county) can put in packaged sewage plants at will and we have no control."

THE DISTRICT HAD paid its consulting firm, Kennedy Engineers of San Francisco, to draft an annexation map. The map, along with the detailed application for annexation, had been submitted to LAFCO by the directors after a year-long debate over whether the district should expand its services into Carmel Valley.

"Our material was not presented. We don't know what effect LAFCO's decision will have on our proposal," McGinnis fumed.

McGINNIS' MOTION TO file an appeal with LAFCO was supported by directors Ted Weller, Jim Pruitt and newly elected board president Vernon Head. Director Charlotte Hurst dissented.

Don Freeman, attorney for the district, advised the directors that the district's application was not affected by LAFCO's decision. "Our application is still being processed," he said.

Freeman said that Michael Johnson, executive director of LAFCO, had assured him that if and when the annexation is approved, the county would dissolve the new sanitation district.

DISTRICT MANAGER MICHAEL Zambory explained that LAFCO's action was prompted by the possibility that the annexation could be forced into an election which could delay a final decision on the proposal until November of 1980.

It could mean a year's delay for construction at Carmel Valley Ranch unless LAFCO agreed to form the new district to service the development, Zambory said.

He pleaded with the directors not to file an appeal for reconsideration of LAFCO's decision, saying: "We've been working closely with those people (LAFCO and Carmel Valley Ranch). We need their cooperation. You'll just be throwing glass in front of their tires."

Echoing Freeman's plea, Zambory said, "I don't see any problem for us. We continue with our annexation proposal and the new district is dissolved if we succeed.

"Carmel Valley Ranch is willing to annex to us, but they just don't want the delay," he said.

DISTRICT BUSINESS Manager Bud "O.K." Bigelow exclaimed, "The county felt a moral obligation not to hold up that development (Carmel Valley Ranch)."

But McGinnis was adamant.

"We should require Carmel Valley Ranch to dedicate an easement to us for our future trunkline. We need guarantees. We need a guarantee we can get an easement through that place," he said.

WELLER, WHO USUALLY opposes McGinnis on major issues, firmly supported the call for an appeal. He said, "We got run over at that LAFCO hearing. What proof is there that the county sanitation district will be dissolved?"

"We should go for a rehearing," Weller declared, adding that it was also a matter of the district's pride.

Freeman cautioned, "I'm not sure the district has any benefit to gain from a rehearing."

"If you feel slighted by LAFCO," Freeman said, "you should remember that LAFCO has the authority over formation of any agency in this county."

JOHNSON CONFIRMED AFTER the directors' meeting that LAFCO had intended only to eliminate a possible delay for Carmel Valley Ranch, and that the new district would be dissolved if the annexation was approved.

"The county certainly doesn't want the new district," he said. Under the proposal, the county Public Works Department would have to assume responsibility for operating the disposal plant.

"Approving it (the new district) is insurance for Carmel Valley Ranch. It doesn't prejudice the sanitary district's annexation," Johnson said. He conceded, however, that Carmel Valley Ranch might not be as anxious to cooperate with the annexation as long as it is under the service umbrella of its own separate district.

"They (Carmel Valley Ranch) have their cake already," Johnson said.

A FINAL DECISION on the creation of the new district rests with the county Board of Supervisors.

The supervisors were expected to consider the matter in February. Johnson said that the appeal will be scheduled for LAFCO's Jan. 22 meeting. LAFCO could either deny the appeal, reschedule it for its February meeting or decide to postpone approval of the county sanitation district until the annexation issue is resolved.

If LAFCO decides to temporarily deny formation of the new district, Johnson explained, the annexation issue could be placed on the ballot as early as June, if an election is necessary. He cautioned, however, that it could be as late as the November election.

According to Freeman, a representative of Carmel Valley Ranch has indicated the developer would be willing to postpone the application for the new district until June.

Johnson, in his initial recommendation to LAFCO, had proposed that the new district not be considered until after the annexation issue was resolved.

50TH YEAR OF SHARING OUR CARING!

Beneath this cover of our magazine due out next week, we begin telling about Community Hospital's Golden Anniversary and about our Auxiliary's Silver Anniversary. There are articles about Charles Kuralt "On the Road" to Monterey to help us commemorate those anniversaries at our annual luncheon meeting January 17th, about the teacher whose pupils didn't forget, the camera that takes motion pictures of the beating heart, the man who thought his hospital job had ended before it started 25 years ago, teaching diabetics to live, how your donated blood saves lives, about the rescue of a recovery nurse's llama, the boy who swallowed lye, and about the nursery nurse who is delivering babies of the babies she delivered at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

ASPIRING ARTIST Linda Upham will challenge Picasso's position in the modern art world as her portrait of cartoonist Bill Bates testifies.

Jason Lande, Leif Ibsen, Chris England, Eric Cederstrom, Sal Cardinale and conspirators Kim Herbstritt and Cara Cooper, who both appear reluctant to pose.

Year of the Child

THROUGHOUT THE DEVELOPING world more than 500 million children lack the minimum necessities of life that should be their birthright—adequate food, medical care, basic education, the right to develop physically and spiritually.

The United Nations, disturbed that children continued to suffer despite all efforts by the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF), unanimously passed a resolution in 1976 proclaiming 1979 International Year of the Child. The Year's major legacy is envisioned to be a permanently higher level of concern for children by both governments and the people in every nation of the world.

It is impossible to say exactly how many children are helped by programs assisted by UNICEF, but the number runs into many millions, according to a report published by the U.S. Committee for UNICEF. The children's emergency fund currently aids projects in over 100 countries with a child population through 15 years of age of nearly 960 million.

Many people question whether UNICEF should increase the chances of a child's survival in an over-populated world ridden by disease, famine and poverty. UNICEF's purpose is summed up in the words of a nurse who, after delivering a child, was asked whether it would not have been better for the baby to die. She responded, "This may be the child who will make the difference in our future."

THE NEEDS OF THAT CHILD and millions of others were met because in December 1946, just one year after the United Nations was organized, members of the world body were convinced that the magnitude and urgency of the needs of the children after World War II called for a separate agency under United Nations auspices. Thus was born the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund.

At the peak of UNICEF operations in Europe, some six million children received a daily supplementary meal and more than eight million were vaccinated against tuberculosis. In 1953, the General Assembly, impressed by UNICEF's achievements, voted to continue UNICEF's mandate indefinitely. With the shift in emphasis from emergency to long-range aid, the words International and Emergency were officially dropped from the name UNICEF, but the well-known initials were kept.

FUNDS FOR UNICEF'S international efforts came entirely from voluntary contributions made by governments and non-governmental sources.

In 1977, UNICEF received $164 million for long-range and emergency rehabilitation assistance.

Though 75 percent of UNICEF's income in 1977 was contributed voluntarily by governments, private fund raising including greeting card sales and supporting organizations provided $41 million.

LOCAL EFFORTS FOR UNICEF include the annual participation in National UNICEF Day every Halloween when youngsters trick or treat for UNICEF. Most recently a series of programs have been sponsored by the American Tin Cannery Mall in Pacific Grove to raise funds for UNICEF in recognition of the International Year of the Child.

Among the special events presented by the mall is a Peninsula-wide Children's Art Competitive. The works of winning artists will be displayed in the mall lobby until Christmas Eve and, if the artist wishes, will then be donated to the United Nations Association Center in Carmel to be sold as a benefit for UNICEF.

Cash prizes awarded to the artists were matched by the mall and donated to UNICEF. All proceeds from the sales of balloons, T-shirts and other goods also go to UNICEF.

When UNICEF was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1965, the executive director, Labouisse, reflected: "To me, the great, the most important meaning of this Nobel award is the solemn recognition that the welfare of today's children is inseparably linked with the peace of tomorrow's world... You have reinforced our profound belief that, each time UNICEF contributes, however modestly, to give today's children a chance to grow into useful and happy citizens."

JANUARY

- LET'S PUT SOME teeth into a residential leash law, instead of us!
- Mayor Norberg is his own advisory committee. "Call the roll! Me, myself and I."
- Resolved: to wait patiently while our younger members of the police force learn our time-honored police-resident relationship.

FEBRUARY

- THE PERFECT SOLUTION to a new office for the mayor is to build a belfry on top of City Hall.
- (Quote from the mayor) "It is sometimes a difficult thing for members of the council to accept what our ordinances call for."
- If Councilman Gross was expected to be a "calming influence," I sure don't want any of his oil on my troubled waters.
- One city department head was quoted last week as saying, "Jack Collins just hasn't learned to bend over for them (the council) and take it."
- Brunn, betrayed and Brown, bewildered, becoming bastions of basic battlelines. Beginning of the breakdown in believability broadcast by belligerent beholders. "Behavior beyond belief," bellowed one benumbed burgomaster, before, a booster.

MARCH

- I LIKE THE PEDICAB idea. I like anything that gives Carmel a unique transportation service, whether it be minibus, horse and buggy, rickshaw or even dog sleds. I like anything that isn't Carmel being pulled around by a jackass.

- Play it again, Sam. Farrly.
- Our council may be proceeding according to Roberts Rules, but they are not proceeding according to Hoyle.

Lines from Alice in Wonderland?

"Let's ban the tour buses," shouted the March Hare-brained.
 "I already did that," said Tweedle-Dumb.
 "Where have you been?"
 "Lost in Flanders Fields," replied the March Hare-brained. "Did you know someone is living there?"
 "Off with his head!"
 "Quiet!" roared Tweedle-Dumb. "You know only the king can say that."
 • Funniest line I've ever read—"The plan clearly places the mayor at the head of the Disaster Council."

$328,000 improvement project
for Carmel Valley Road approved

A ONE-MILE SECTION of Carmel Valley Road between Valley Greens Drive and Los Arboles will be repaved and improved with eight-foot wide shoulders in 1981. The $328,000 project is part of Monterey County's five-year public works program.

The 1980-85 program, which apportions federal, state and county funds for road and bridge improvements, was approved by the county Board of Supervisors last week.

The Carmel Valley Road project will be funded through the Federal Aid Secondary program, according to Bruce McClain, director of public works.

McClain said that Congress passed a $9 billion Highway Improvement Act this year that includes money for urban and rural (secondary) routes throughout the nation.

The county will not have to provide any of its own capital improvement funds for the $328,000 repaving, he said, since the state is providing the matching local funds.

WIDENING CARMEL VALLEY Road to four lanes from Via Petra (where the four-lane section presently ends) to Valley Greens Drive will be considered if additional federal funds become available, McClain said.

The section, just under two miles, will cost

Robinson Canyon Road according to the new Master Plan.

THE MASTER PLAN recommends that "fees be imposed as a condition of granting building permits" with the funds to be expended for the improvement and widening of Carmel Valley Road.

County policy requires developers who plan projects along Carmel Valley Road to contribute toward the widening improvement.

So far the only major contribution as a result of this policy has come from the planned Carmel Valley Ranch. McClain explained, however, that the contribution from Carmel Valley Ranch for construction of an improved intersection at Robinson Canyon and Carmel Valley roads will be credited against its future commitment for the four-lane widening policy.

"What we have so far is a negative amount of money," McClain said of the county's program to widen Carmel Valley Road.

He said that the county will begin collecting fees from all developers within the Valley after the Master Plan is adopted and an ordinance is enacted to implement the program.

THE REPLACEMENT of Garzas Road bridge in Carmel Valley is included in the five-year public works program. The $190,000 project to install a modern, two-lane bridge will be funded by $152,000 from the federal Highway Act and $38,000 from the county.

McClain explained that bridge improvements were included in the federal Highway Act after a number of old bridges failed in some Eastern states.

Garzas Road bridge has been given a top priority in the federal program because it provides the only access to the 30 homes in the Rancho Del Monte subdivision. The project is scheduled for 1980.

County policy requires developers to contribute toward widening improvements.

an estimated $2 million to widen, he said. The project is listed under the Federal Aid Urban (FAU) program.

FAU funding for this project will depend, McClain said, on a federal survey that will be conducted next year to determine which roads are part of the Monterey Peninsula "urbanized area."

Carmel Valley Road from Via Petra to Robinson Canyon Road is planned as a four-lane "major thoroughfare" in the proposed revision to the Carmel Valley Master Plan. It will remain a two-lane rural road east of

PADRE SPORTS

By MARK SANFORD

THE CARMEL HIGH BOYS' varsity basketball team concluded its own tournament on a winning note by beating Monterey, 40-39, in a very close and exciting contest.

Art Strum led the way with 20 points in basically a defensive game.

With 2:10 to go in the final quarter, Gary Childs scored a basket and then on a steal made an excellent lay-up hook-shot. Then Adam Sherburne and Strum each made a pair of free throws to give the game to Carmel.

In Friday's game, the Padres lost to Westmont High of San Jose, 54-45.

Strum led the Padres with 16 points, followed by Childs with eight and his excellent play.

For-sure future bright spots for the Carmel team are five juniors who came on in the final three minutes and put on an impressive show of quickness and skill.

They are Anthony Galang, Richard Murphy, Chris Panetta, Todd Bliesner and David Knottenkamper. They had two steals, Galang and Panetta, and three baskets by Bliesner, Murphy and Knottenkamper.

It was too bad that this somewhat seemingly "secret weapon" did not have the opportunity to show what they really could do with more time.

The team lost the opening night of the tournament, 35-31, to Hollister High. John Parsons had 16 points.

They then beat North Monterey County, 37-32, with Brad Langley leading the way with 10 points, followed by Brad Wiesner with nine.

In the consolation finals, Parsons and Wiesner combined for 30 points for a 49-33 win over Gonzales. Parsons had 18 and Wiesner 12 points.

Bill Schwartz is the coach.

The Padres next game is against Santa Cruz at 6 p.m. Dec. 29 at home.

WINNING ONLY ONE game so far this season, a 45-40 victory over King City in overtime, the freshmen boys' basketball team looks to the opening of league play on Jan. 4 for better happenings.

The team has played in two tournaments and will play Santa Cruz at home at 4:30 p.m. on Dec. 29.

Brett Langley, Mike Lucido and Jeff Tehan have been the team's high scorers.

THE SOCCER TEAM'S annual alumni game is Dec. 27. Graduates of former teams are encouraged to come out and play. Game time is noon.

COACH BOB WALTHOUR says that the wrestlers are having a fantastic season.

THIS WRITER, BEING of sound mind and body, plus a soccer player, has not dared to get near a girl field hockey player because of the maniacs they are. Sorry, but they are doing excellent, having beaten Santa Catalina 2-0, with goals by Linda Fleager and Theresa Ostrander.

The returning veterans are Mary Wald, Kerry Ostrander, T. Ostrander, Vonnie Hildebrand, Tricia Martin, Lee Ann Stienmetz and Fleager.

Almost destroyed by Allied bombers

Dresden slowly recovers from WWII

By AL EISNER

A GERMAN DRAMATIST who witnessed the destruction of Dresden by Allied warplanes in February, 1945 wrote: "Who has forgotten how to weep learns it again at the destruction of Dresden."

The people of Dresden, one of the largest cities in the German Democratic Republic (East Germany) will never forget that event. More than 25,000 perished in one night, and the entire center of the famous city was leveled.

A visitor to Dresden, once called "Florence of the North," is at once impressed with the great amount of energy that is still being expended — 35 years later — to rebuild the city and restore its position as the leading art center of Germany.

Great scaffolds cover the burned-out shell of the famed Dresden Opera House. The restoration, which started five years ago, will take another five to complete. Hulks of other buildings remain as silent monuments to the fury of the bombing attack.

At the center of Dresden, spacious pedestrian malls and wide boulevards lead to several hubs of commercial and tourist activity. New high-rise apartments, hotels and office buildings, built in haste without regard for human scale, rise skyward. Dresdeners and foreigners alike swarm through the busy stores and restaurants in pursuit of commerce and foreign currency.

WHILE MANY FAMOUS BUILDINGS, including the royal palace and cathedral were destroyed, other structures suffered partial damage. Luckily for Dresden and the rest of the world, however, Dresden's art treasures escaped largely unscathed.

A visit to the world-famed Green Vault is worth a journey to Europe. Millions of Americans were fortunate to see one-third of the priceless collection when the "Treasures of Dresden" toured the country (including San Francisco).

The huge collection of valuables defies description. The visitor is treated to a mind-boggling display of treasures of gold, silver, precious woods, ivory, coral, and pearls, diamonds, sapphires, emeralds, rubies by artisans who created for the kings and electors of Saxony.

Dozens of rooms are filled with sword hilts, cups, necklaces, rings, tiaras, bracelets, pendants, boxes, vaults, decorative figurines and other objects of incalculable value. Saxony, once the richest, most powerful kingdom of the Holy Roman Empire, was a center of commerce, and the riches collected in the Green Vault were carefully collected over the centuries.

What was the source of the wealth reflected in the collection? Silver deposits were discovered in the hills of Saxony (now the southeast portions of East Germany) at the end of the 12th century. The area soon became a center of mining, and the Saxons exported tin, iron, cobalt, copper and valuable gemstones. A flourishing middle class controlled a thriving economy as late as the 16th century. (It is no accident that European Protestantism had its origins in Saxony.)

I remember gazing at a display case in the Green Vault filled with large, sparkling, clearcut gems. The objects in the case, if made of crystal, would have been worth a king's ransom. I must admit I was stupefied to learn they were all diamonds.

Be sure to allow at least the better part of one day to savor the treasures.

THE OLD MASTERS on view in the Dresden Picture Gallery may not rival the collections in the Louvre, the Uffizzi or other major museums, but there are plenty of fine masterworks to be seen. Allow 3-4 hours to browse through the collection.

Among the works by Italian masters you'll find paintings by Mantegna, Andrea Del Sarto, Raffaello, Botticelli, Messina, Giorgione, Veronese, Titian, Canaletto and Tintoretto. There are also fine examples of mature works by Rembrandt, Rubens, Brueghel, Holbein, Vermeer, Velazquez, Murillo, Van Dyck and others.

Among the special treats in the gallery are The Tower of Babel, by Van Valckenborch; Canaletto's The Grand Canal in Venice; A Girl Reading a Letter by Vermeer; Venus Asleep by Giorgione; and Rembrandt's famous portrait of Saskia as a girl.

EVER ALERT to propaganda opportunities, the Minister of Culture and Education makes certain that visitors to the museums of Dresden are aware that they exist only because of the heroism and the generosity of the Soviet Union and its people.

These are excerpts from an official guidebook to the museums of Dresden:

Once these museums came to exist as a manifestation of ruthless striving for political power — with a view to impressing "ambassadors and other distinguished strangers" by princely splendour (Count Bruhl), now they have become a national sanctuary of the working people in the true sense of the word.

About the middle of the 19th century the access to the art treasures was still disallowed to the plain people, to peasants, workmen and workers, for an announcement of 1839 referred to the fact that the gallery was opened on weekdays from nine to one for "people dressed decently" only. This regulation was for the benefit of wealthy citizens and pensionaries exclusively.

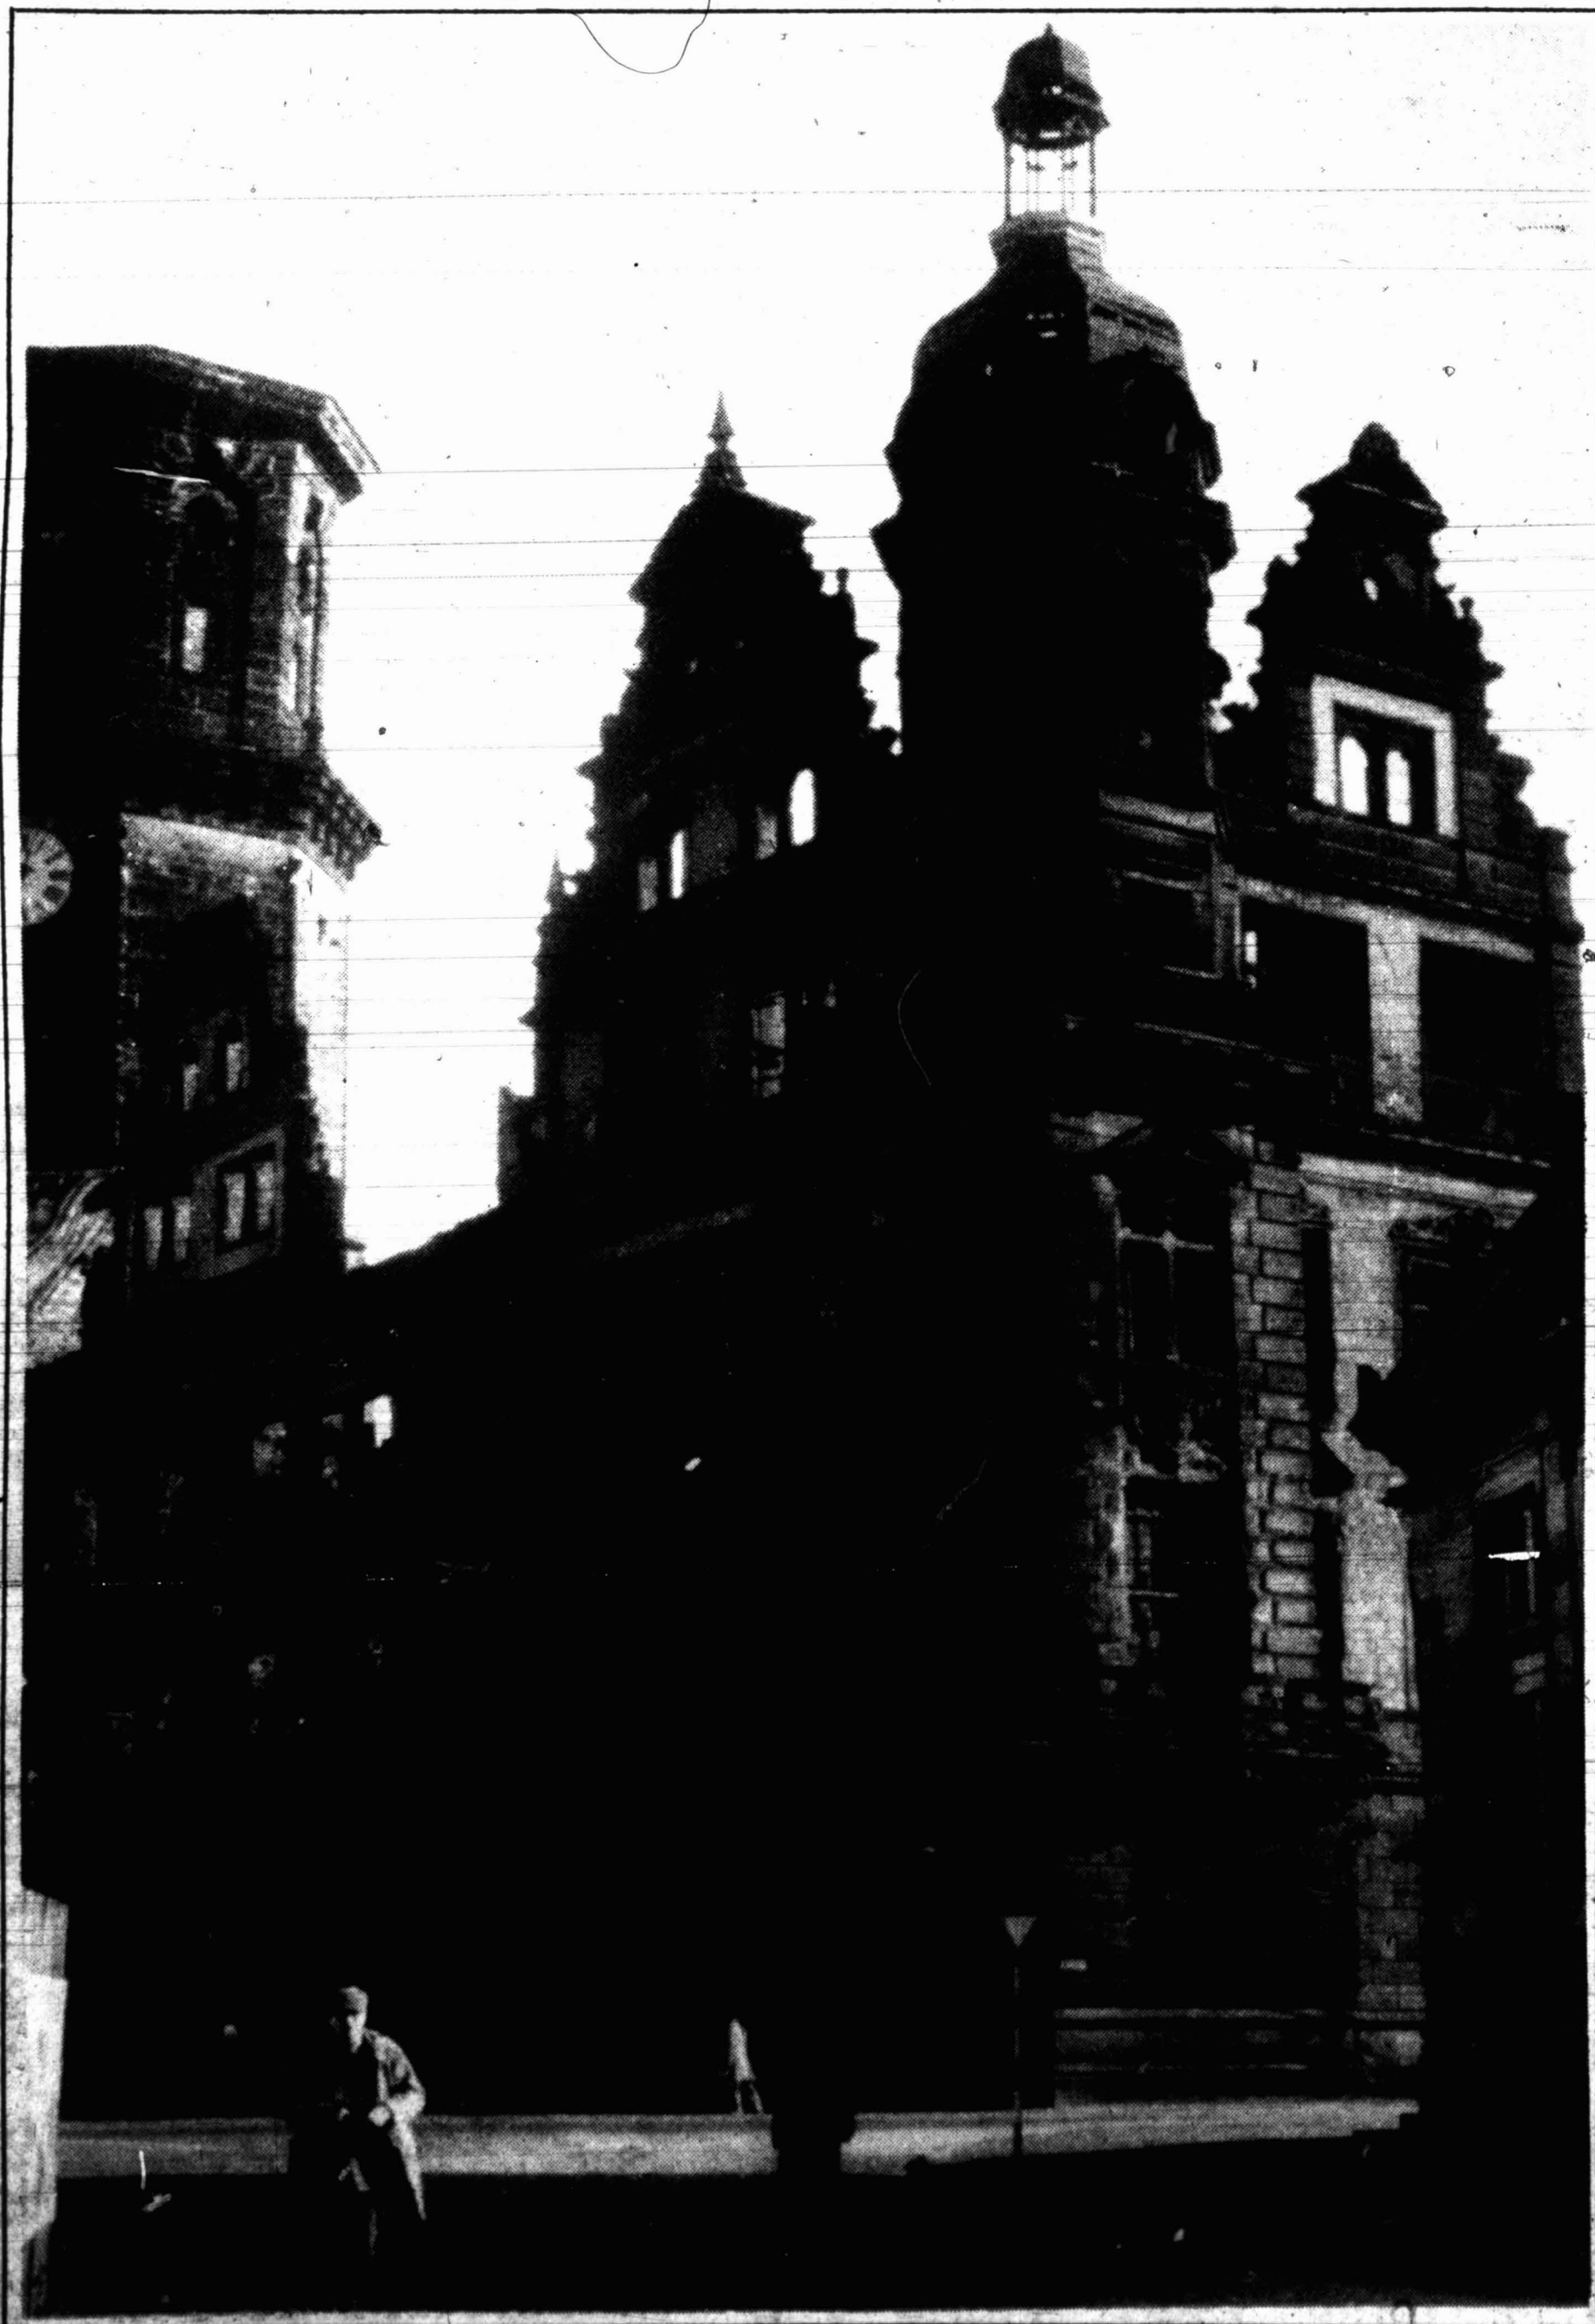

Representatives of the progressive middle classes demanded as early as in the 19th century to open the gates of the art collections to the people, and to employ the works of art as a "highly powerful means for national education." But only in the German Democratic Republic this demand could be put into practice without reservation.

The utilization of the museums by the working people of our country reflects — regarded from a historical point of view — the general social development, too. At present the ten museums of the public art collections at Dresden are attended by two million people a year. Alone 64,000 of the approx. 500,000 inhabitants of Dresden, above all workers, purchased an annual ticket in 1975 for the permanent admission to the art museums.

It was not the subjective artistic insight of Augustus the Strong and of his son August III that were decisive for the foundation of the museums and the display of artistic life in Dresden and Saxony, but the objective processes of the social revolution of the country: the social upswing of the middle classes as a consequence of the economic stabilization of Saxony, the urging of these new social forces, directed against feudalism, of the partly very rich towns, also with a view to a cultural progress. The art treasures collected by Augustus the Strong and all other Saxon rulers, and representative buildings in Dresden served for the gorgeous display of the court and for public representation. The working people had to pay dearly for these extravagances with a life full of privation.

The second world war unleashed by Germany exposed the Dresden art treasures to highest danger. On the urgent requests of the few remaining specialists on museums, the evacuation of the art treasures to 45 different places in Saxony (manors and castles) was started in 1942. When the war approached the frontiers of Germany, the Nazi leaders irresponsibly ordered to transport the stocks evacuated to places east of the river Elbe to deposits west of the Elbe.

The art treasures were now taken to highly insufficient accommodations such as the lime-pit of Pockau-Lengefeld or to the tunnel of the sandstone pit of Rottwerndorf.

BURNED OUT HULKS of once proud buildings can be seen in many parts of Dresden. The East German government has placed a high priority on restoration of major buildings. The Opera House, undergoing restoration for the last five years,

This is third in a series of articles by Mr. Eisner, editor and publisher of the "Carmel Pine Cone" and "Carmel Valley Outlook." They are based on his observations during a recent trip to Europe, which included visits to several countries behind the Iron Curtain. Earlier articles were concerned with West and East Berlin. Still to come are his impressions of Prague, Bucharest, Istanbul and, perhaps, two other cities. The articles are not meant to be a comprehensive view of these countries, but rather the author's own impressions of selected slices of the history and culture of the areas. The tour was sponsored by the Monterey County Symphony Assn.

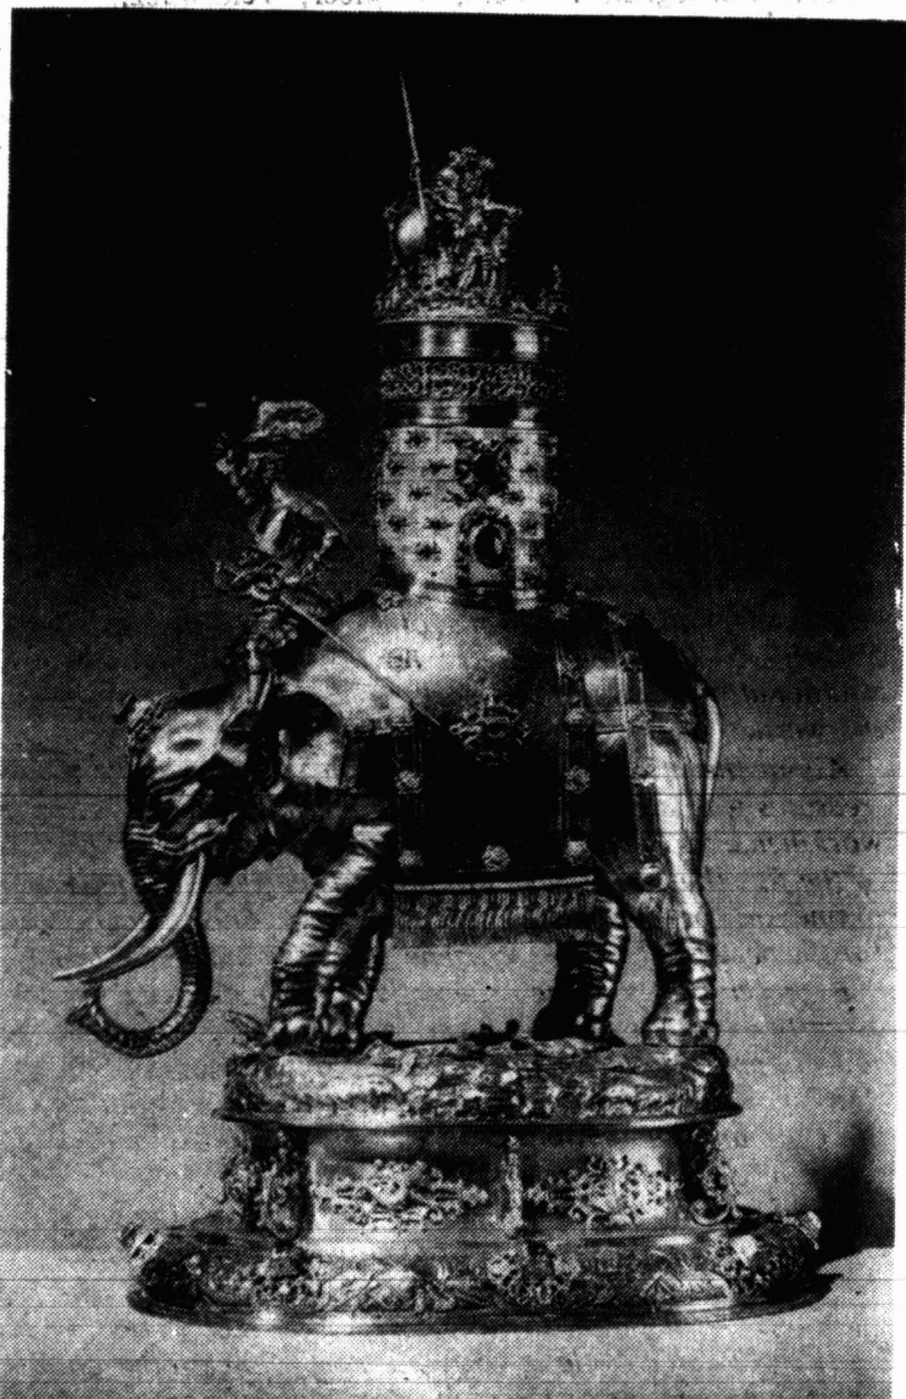

THEN AND NOW: Dresden, once a flourishing center of industry and culture, was almost completely destroyed by Allied bombers in a single massive raid on February 13, 1945. More than 25,000 people died during the terror bombing and the resulting fires. Only a handful of Dresden's famous buildings survived. Many others were heavily damaged, and are still being restored. In the center of the city, spacious malls with tasteless high-rise apartments, office and hotel buildings now serve as commercial hubs. The ever-present monument to Lenin can be seen in middle, right of this photograph.

THE TREASURES of the Green Vault, which contain the fabulous collection of the Saxon kings, are mind-boggling. One-third of the collection was included in the "Treasures of Dresden" exhibit that toured the U.S. a few years ago. This drinking vessel, which is dated before 1600, is made of gold, with emeralds, rubies, mother-of-pearl and one sapphire. It is 20 inches high.

Consequently the paintings and other valuables of the collections were exposed to destruction. Another objective of the Nazi rulers was to remove the art treasures for speculative post-war transactions, and to get them out of the reach of the Red Army.

The losses by the war would certainly have been much greater unless the Soviet Army had secured the attainable works quickly and thoroughly. We gratefully remember the rescue operations of the Soviet troops, who saved the Dresden art treasures from destruction amidst the disorders during the last few days of World War II in May 1945.

When the Red Army marched into Dresden, the 164th battalion of the 5th army of the Guards of the 1st Ukrainian front under the command of its commanding officer Major Perevostchikov was ordered to trace and secure the evacuated art treasures. The officers, soldiers, and the experts of aesthetics, museums and restoration, as well as pictorial artists delegated to the rescue commando, accomplished their complicated task excellently in spite of greatest difficulties.

After being secured, the art treasures found a temporary homestead in the museums of Moscow, Kiev and Leningrad, and were conscientiously preserved by our Soviet colleagues.

Even before the art treasures returned from the Soviet Union the responsible Soviet occupation authorities made every endeavor to cultivate the classical cultural heritage for the purposes of an intellectual taking possession by the working people.

When more than 35,000 people suffered a futile death in the blizzard of bombs of the barbaric Anglo-American air-raid of February 13th, 1945, meaningless to the assailants, when the city of Dresden was completely destroyed on an area of about 5.8 square miles, the world-renowned collections of Dresden also lost their museums.

With a view to consistent realization of the principles of socialist cultural policy, the German Democratic Republic created modern museums for the famous treasures of world-wide significance within the reconstructed cultural centers of the one-time "Florence on the Elbe" and its new residential areas.

For the first time in its history, Dresden, the flourishing socialist big city with a dynamic industry, numerous scientific institutes and colleges, delightful historic monuments and scenic beauties, place of activity of famous artists and scholars, also became a center of a vivid meeting between the working people and the arts.

Supervisor Sam Farr:

Metering of wells inevitable

By STEVE HELLMAN

METERING AND REGISTRATION of wells in Carmel Valley is inevitable.

County and state officials made this prediction last week in response to the dispute over a plan that would require well owners in Carmel Valley to install meters and register their wells within six months.

Monterey County Supervisor Sam Farr said, "Well metering is going to happen. We have to know the dynamics of our groundwater supplies.

"Does the groundwater flow evenly, or does it pool? Is there a big lake down there, or other aquifers?" Farr said.

"We don't have a window underground. We don't know for sure how much water is down there. The water management district is trying to fine-tune our knowledge of the supply," he said of the proposed plan for a groundwater zone.

DIRECTORS OF THE Monterey Peninsula Water Management District granted preliminary approval on Dec. 10 for the creation of the "zero-charge groundwater zone."

Although it is not intended to force well owners to pay for the water they pump, the zone concept was attacked by several owners of large wells who fear that a rate charge for water is the inevitable outcome of the metering and registration proposal.

Farr said that the water management district is simply "following in the footsteps" of other districts throughout the state that have enacted metering to gather groundwater data. In some cases, he acknowledged, pump taxes have resulted.

Echoing the caution made by the directors at their meeting Dec. 10, Farr said that the district cannot tax for water taken from private wells unless there is a public works project that gives a benefit to the well owners.

A project that could lead to pump charges, for example, would be construction of a new dam in Carmel Valley.

"Santa Clara County has pump taxes because they have a dam that recharges the groundwater supplies," Farr said. "You can't charge for owning the well, but you can charge for the benefit to the well."

FARR EMPHASIZED that the immediate purpose of the groundwater zone is to provide "hard information" to support a water allocation plan for the Monterey Peninsula in 1980.

The water management district intends to establish a water allocation formula. Each of the Peninsula cities, Carmel Valley and unincorporated areas of the county would be allotted a certain amount of water based on its growth projections.

UNDER THE ALLOCATION system, the district would have the power to halt development in any jurisdiction that exceeds its allotment.

The allocation system is planned because demand for water is expected to exceed the estimated supply by 1985.

Farr helped draft the legislation that created the powers of the water management district after Peninsula voters approved it in 1978.

He said, "We took the best and the brightest language from water acts throughout the state, and added a phrase that gives the district control over everything that has to do with water."

CLYDE McDONALD, ATTORNEY for the state Legislature's Water, Parks and Wildlife Committee, said that the plans of the water management district are consistent with a statewide move to regulate groundwater supplies.

McDonald said that a report released last year by a governor's commission called for the "same type of management of groundwater that now exists for surface water."

The blue-ribbon commission, appointed by Governor Jerry Brown in 1976 to review California water rights law, determined that there was nothing more than a laissez faire policy regarding groundwater sources.

The 1978 report, which drew fire from farmers throughout the state, reported that landowners were "sticking in wells regardless of the effect on their neighbors," McDonald said.

ED HABER, OWNER of the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club, criticizes the well metering proposal. Haber was concerned that the metering zone "might unintentionally favor new development." He called for further clarification of the purpose for metering private wells.

California water rights have historically allowed landowners to tap groundwater supplies beneath their land without government restriction. The traditional solution when water supplies fell short was to build more dams, create more reservoirs or drill more wells, McDonald said.

"It's reasonable to want to figure out how much water we've got left," he said.

McDONALD CONFIRMED THAT it is inevitable that the water management district will charge well owners if and when a dam is constructed in Carmel Valley.

"But you never talk about charges until you have a benefit to show," he said. "The district first has to demonstrate that a dam is cost-effective, that it will assist pumping lifts in the Valley by recharging the groundwater."

Demonstrating these benefits, McDonald explained, requires gathering data on groundwater. Once the district demonstrates a benefit, however, it still has to determine who will benefit and who will pay for the dam, McDonald said.

McDonald said that a dam can be financed by the following methods if it is for water supply only and paid for locally without federal help:

- A tax system with no direct relationship to the project. A sales tax levied against all local residents and landowners would fit the bill, McDonald said.

- A fixed charge for property that would benefit from the dam project. A fixed fee (he suggested $50 per acre per year) would be collected from all landowners benefiting from the project, McDonald said. He considered this more "politically feasible" than a sales tax.

- A fee assessed only to landowners who have a direct beneficiary relationship to the dam. A most equitable approach, McDonald said, the charge would be based on how much water a household or farmer used.

McDonald said that a sliding scale fee could also be charged on a per-acre basis, with four land use categories: irrigated agricultural land, non-irrigated agricultural land, urban land and undeveloped land.

McDONALD SAID THAT the well metering program is important to enforcement of the water management district's power to halt development in jurisdictions that exceed their water allocation. "If you're talking about a possible moratorium on development, you have to have some idea of supply ... some hard data, or you'll be ripped to shreds in court," McDonald said.

He said of the unpopularity of the plan, "The district is biting the bullet like it should."

THE METERING AND registration requirements would affect about 70 wells used to irrigate farmlands and golf courses in Carmel Valley, according to Bruce Buel, manager of the water management district.

Wells serving fewer than 2.5 acres, or with openings less than two inches in diameter, will be exempt from the metering requirement, he said.

The district has the power to require well owners to purchase and install the meters, Buel said. He estimated that meters cost from $500 for a two-inch opening to as much as $4,000 for a 24-inch wellhead.

A well owner could avoid the metering requirement by allowing the district to have access to his private energy consumption records. The district can determine the amount of water extracted by computing the electrical units used by the well's pump, eliminating the need for the water-flow meter.

BUEL EMPHASIZED that the only intent of forming the groundwater zone is to gather information. The district would have to create a new zone if it was necessary to collect a water fee.

"We have no idea of the water quality, the depth of the groundwater and the exact amount of extraction," Buel said.

About 250 of the 300 private wells in the Valley are connected to individual homes he said. Because the average household uses about one-half of an acre-foot of water per year, he said these private wells amount to virtually a fraction of the usage. He added that the district currently has an estimate of the amount of water pumped by these wells.

BY COMPARISON, BUEL said, the district can only guess how much water is pumped by the agricultural wells.

The 69 agricultural and golf course wells are pumping an estimated 3,000 acre-feet per year, he said. These wells are using potentially half as much as the municipal wells, but are not being monitored, he explained.

The 20 municipal wells that are operated in the Valley by the California-American Water Company and Water West extract 4,000-6,000 acre-feet per year, Buel said. An acre-foot is equal to 386,000 gallons.

"If we want to look at the big picture, we have to meter those agricultural wells," Buel said.

"I CAN'T HELP BUT feel threatened and frightened by metering," Nick Lombardo told the district board at its Dec. 10 meeting. Lombardo is president of Rancho Canada Golf Club.

Lombardo, who said that he also represented the owners of large agricultural lands including the Odello family, declared: "Water is our lifeblood. It's like food from a mother."

Additional time is necessary to review the district's intent with the metering, he said. "Exactly what is the proposal? Will you charge us down the road?"

ED HABER, PRESIDENT of Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club and the Quail Lodge, said, "We have no objection to you knowing how much we use. But what is the purpose?"

The wells on Haber's property, formerly a dairy owned by Charles Lindberg, have existed for 45 years, he said. "We were told that if we cut back on water use, it would allow for more development," he said.

Haber refused to elaborate on who told him that water conservation for more development was the intent of the zone, although he admitted it was not anyone connected with the water management district.

MILT FRUMKIN, OWNER of the Saddle Mountain Recreation Park, echoed the sentiment. "What is the bottom line? I've been listening to a lot of ifs, ands and buts. I think what we're talking about is having to pay for the water out of our own pumps."

Before the district could charge for water, Buel repeated, it would have to have a project that will benefit the well owners. Even then, the zone created for the project would have to be approved by the voters, he said.

A zone could be used for financing a project like a new and larger San Clemente Dam, Buel said. If it could be found to be a direct benefit, he said, costs of the dam could be accrued to well owners.

The water management district is presently considering a plan to build a larger dam downstream from the existing San Clemente Dam on the Carmel River.

Mark condominium, Highlands lot split proposals delayed

FINAL DECISIONS ON the Barbara Mark condominium project in Carmel Valley Village and the Constantine Ash lot-split in Carmel Highlands have been postponed until next year.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors continued both matters on Dec. 18 to dates in January.

The Mark project was stalled by an appeal filed by a long-time opponent, the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association.

The Ash lot-split was delayed by a technical detail.

JAN. 22 at 1:30 P.M. was scheduled for the supervisors to hear the appeal of the planning commission decision to allow Mrs. Mark to proceed with her 40-unit condominium project. The commission decided Nov. 28 that Mrs. Mark was not guilty of any error when a land survey discovered that her parcel was one acre less than originally presented.

A tentative subdivision map was approved last July for the 40-unit project on the basis that the parcel was 9.1 acres. It was later found to be 8.1 acres.

THE CARMEL VALLEY Property Owners Association, which has opposed the project for seven years, requested that the county order Mrs. Mark to trim four units because of the one-acre discrepancy.

At the Nov. 27 meeting, Mrs. Mark offered to trim two units. The commission decided that she did not have to eliminate any units. The CVPOA appealed the decision to the supervisors.

CVPOA member Mary Ann Matthews called the commission decision a "dangerous precedent."

Mrs. Mark said, "We find the numbers game repugnant."

The supervisors, faced with the Christmas season, decided to postpone the emotional issue until after the holidays.

THE ASH LOT-SPLIT application was continued to Jan. 8 at 11:30 a.m. Ash, a Millbrae resident, wants to build a home on property that he has owned on Spindrift Drive at Yankee Point since 1964.

According to his attorney, Brian Finegan, Ash sold half of the acre-lot in 1969, and the present owner of the adjoining lot has a legal Coastal Commission building permit. Ash has sought a permit from the county to build on his half-acre lot.

The snag is that the county Planning Department has no record of a lot-split on Ash's property.

The county Planning Commission denied Ash a building permit last September because of the dispute over the legality of the lot-split and what the commissioners cited as "inadequate septic tank capacity."

ASH APPEALED TO THE supervisors and they agreed on Dec. 11 to approve the minor subdivision. Their action was based on the advice of planning department staff who conceded that Ash had a right to believe he owns a legal lot of record.

The supervisors ordered Finegan to submit evidence of the 1969 sale and the permit issued by the Regional Coastal Commission for the adjoining lot.

At the Dec. 18 meeting, Finegan requested the continuance to January, saying he had not had time to gather the pertinent documents.

Ash will still have to apply for a building permit and win approval from the county Health Department, which insists a half-acre lot cannot support a septic tank.

Flood control another headache

Traffic problems plague Odello proposal

INCREASED TRAFFIC CONGESTION along Highway 1 and the need for extensive river dikes are among the findings in the Environmental Impact Report released this month for the Odello family project proposed at the entrance of Carmel Valley.

The EIR evaluates four alternative plans for the 134-acre agricultural parcel east of Highway 1 and south of the Carmel River. It finds that the most adverse impacts would result from the Odello's ALPS plan (Agricultural Land Preserve System).

Proposed in the plan are a 200-unit hotel on 22 acres and 97 condominiums on 16 acres beside Highway 1. Sixty-eight acres would remain in agricultural use and 12 acres in riparian (native) vegetation. Another 10 acres would be used for roads.

The alternatives studied were a modified ALPS plan with the same multi-purpose development, although aligned differently on the site. Two other alternate plans would essentially retain the 134-acre parcel in agricultural use. One would include a farmer's market and both would provide for expansion of existing housing for farmworkers.

THE ALPS PLAN WOULD have significant adverse impacts on traffic, native vegetation and visual resources. It would also increase the demand for fire and police services and create a potential flood damage situation, the EIR finds.

It states: "The addition of project traffic from alternative B (modified ALPS) and ALPS would increase the frequency and lengthen the time that congestion occurs on Highway 1."

Because increased road capacity could induce further development, future road improvements along Highway 1 could bring only "temporary relief," the EIR states.

It also notes that there is "considerable public opposition" to the proposed plans to improve Highway 1 north of Carmel River. Construction of the Hatton Canyon Freeway between Carpenter Street and the Carmel River is one proposed plan. Other alternative proposals are the addition of a climbing lane and two-way left-turn lanes or widening Highway 1 to five lanes.

The city of Carmel has staunchly opposed construction of the Hatton Canyon Freeway, although it is shown in the proposed revision to the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

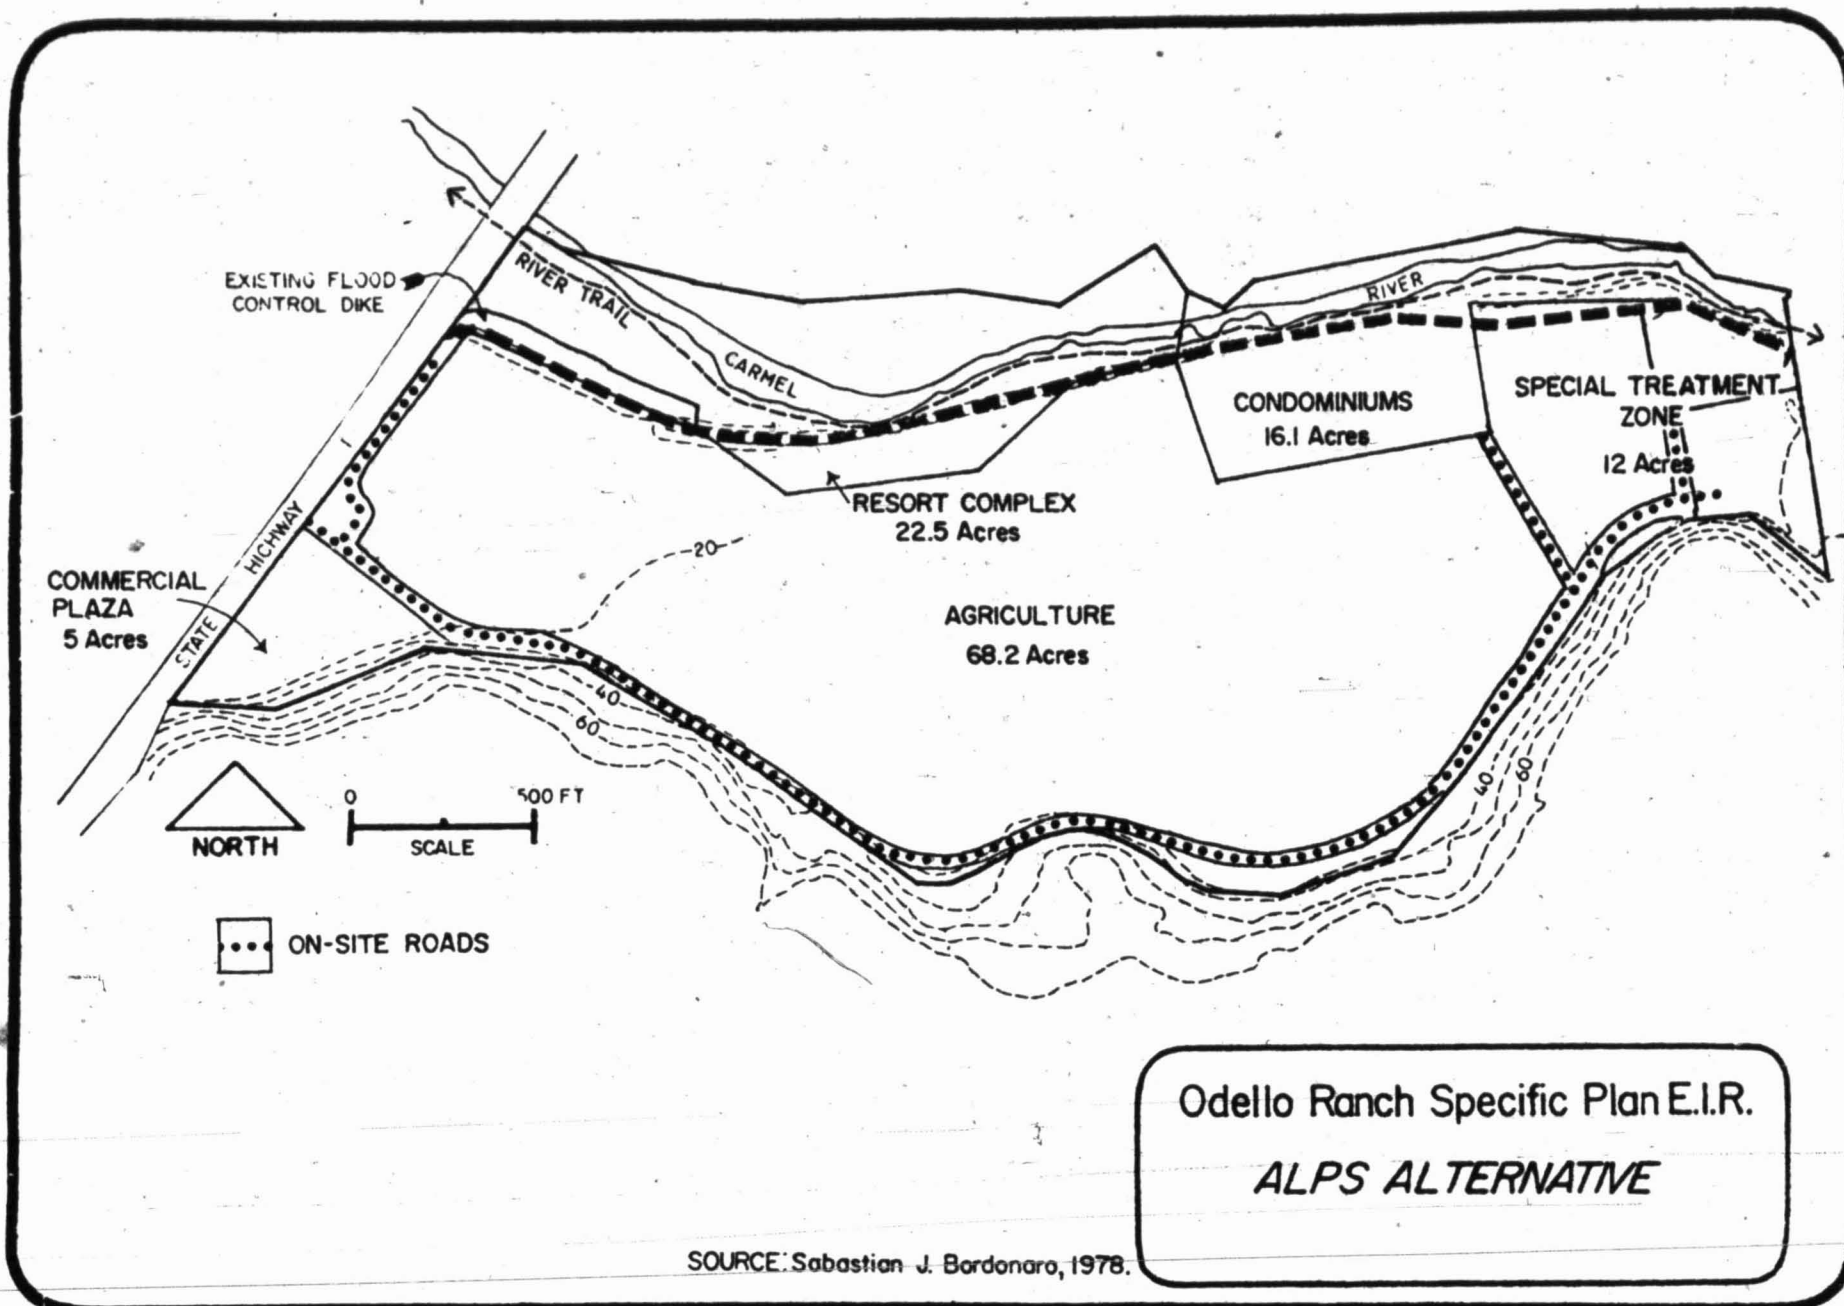

WIDENING OF HIGHWAY 1 to four lanes south of the Carmel River is prohibited, the EIR states, by Coastal Commission policies.

"If development occurred south of the river (as in the Odello project), future congestion would occur where the highway narrowed from four lanes to two," the EIR states.

It concludes that there are no possible mitigation measures for the increased traffic congestion that would result from the proposed hotel, residential units and farmer's market.

DUE TO "SAFETY HAZARDS" on Highway 1, the EIR notes that only one access road into the proposed Odello development would be permitted. The EIR finds that potential hazards would exist in the event of an emergency if this access point were blocked.

The county Public Works Department, in its review of the ALPS proposal, considered designing the access road as a section of the proposed South Carmel Valley Road, an alternative east-west route that would serve the lower four

THE LAYOUT of the development proposed by the Odello family in its ALPS plan is intended to preserve half of the 134-acre parcel in agricultural use. The Environmental Impact Report for the project, however, finds adverse impacts will

miles of Carmel Valley.

The revised Carmel Valley Master Plan deletes the South Carmel Valley Road proposal.

The EIR states that where the access road terminates at the eastern boundary of the Odello project, it would induce development on undeveloped lands east of the site, producing further impacts with the intersection at Highway 1. It calls for the access road to be designed so as to "discourage future connection to properties east of the site."

"IMPROVEMENT OF DIKES along the river, or floodplain land use controls, are necessary to protect the site against storm flows," the EIR states.

Additional protection could be provided, the EIR finds, by either "excavating" the river channel or constructing "levees" to enlarge present flow capacity.

But the construction of new dikes would be prohibited under the revised Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Unless the county regulates new development in the upper Carmel River watershed to reduce water run-off, river flows will reach or exceed previous flood levels and inundate the Odello property, the EIR concludes.

THE ODELLO PROJECT could be prohibited by the revised Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The Citizens Study Committee that worked for 2½ years on the revision suggested that the property be designated "permanent agricultural open space," and be rezoned to prevent any commercial or residential development.

A subcommittee of the county Board of Supervisors has recommended a provision that would allow the residential development but not the hotel.

The supervisors will vote on this provision when they consider adoption of the new Master Plan on Jan. 15.

THE DEVELOPMENT WOULD be required to hook-up to the Carmel Sanitary District sewer system despite a present district ban on new connections, the EIR notes.

The sewage disposal snag is further complicated, the EIR indicates, by the fact that: "Although the project site is not included within the district's service area, a contractual agreement between the property owners and the Carmel Sanitary District in 1971 specifies annexation to the service area upon written request of the owner."

But in 1976 the district suspended further annexations and new connections through two ordinances that "supercede previous agreements and currently prevent sewer service by the district to the (Odello's) site," according to the EIR.

"The Odellos contend that they have a legal enforceable right to be annexed into and connected to the district's sewer facilities, and that legal proceedings will be instituted to enforce this right, if necessary," the EIR states.

The moratorium on annexations and connections resulted from a ruling of the State Water Resources Control Board that forced the district to limit its discharge into Carmel Bay. The ruling was handed down after portions of Carmel Bay were declared an Area of Special Biological Significance by the state in 1975.

IRONICALLY, THE ODELLO property is being sought by the sanitary district as a site for a wastewater reservoir as part of its effort to limit its discharge into the bay. The district is negotiating with the Odellos to purchase the site.

The Odellos have proposed development of their farmland since 1970 because of rising property taxes. To relieve some of the economic pressures, they sold 157 acres west of Highway 1 to the state in 1974.

Between 1970 and 1976 the Odello east property was proposed for a 300-room spa/resort and 298-unit residential development, according to the EIR. In 1976 this plan was withdrawn and replaced by the ALPS plan, which was designed by architect Sebastian Bordonaro of Carmel and Bestor Engineers of Monterey.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors in October, 1978 ordered a Specific Plan be prepared for the Odello property. The Odello Ranch Specific Plan proposed the four land use alternatives that are evaluated in the EIR.

Solution suggested for Carmel Center road dispute

The Monterey County Public Works Department has devised a novel solution to the road dispute surrounding the proposed expansion of the Carmel Center, but a final decision on the matter has been postponed until Jan. 15.

The county Board of Supervisors discussed the public works proposal at its meeting Dec. 18, but decided to postpone its ruling to give the developers and property owners time to reach an agreement.

To resolve the issue of whether an intersection next to the development on Rio Road east of Highway 1 should be closed by a center divider, the public works department suggests that the intersection be left open and a traffic signal be installed.

Businesses along Carmel Center Place opposed the plan of Carmel Valley Partners to block the intersection as part of its plans for an outdoor mall project in the Carmel Center at the entrance to Carmel Valley. The businesses—Carl Patnude's Arco Gas Station, Merrill Lynch brokers and Wells Fargo Bank—argued that closing the intersection would restrict their public access.

The developers intended to close all three existing access points into the Carmel Center along Rio Road, and construct one main intersection in the middle of the block, along with a traffic signal.

Public works agreed it would disrupt traffic patterns if the intersection at Carmel Center Place were blocked by a center divider. It was suggested that the intersection be left open, as long as someone agreed to install a traffic signal that would be synchronized with the signal at the mid-block intersection.

The businesses on Carmel Center Place should pay for the traffic signal, public works decided.

But the owner of the surrounding property—Carmel Properties Company—stepped forward to offer to pay for the signal.

"We just have to work out the mechanics," said Richard Osborne, part owner of Carmel Properties Company. Cost of the traffic signal is estimated to be $80,000.

Supervisors have approved the plans for the 91,453-square-foot mall at Rio Road and Highway 1. The expansion would double the size of Carmel Center. Once it is completed, the center will be renamed "Crossroads."

THIS 47-ACRE PARCEL of prime agricultural land located next to the Valley Hills Shopping Center in Carmel Valley is the proposed site for a 73-unit subdivision. Developer Al Saroyan Jr. of Fresno plans to construct 31 single-family houses and 42 condominium units. The project, located on Carmel Valley Road, 3½ miles east of Highway 1, would convert the prime agricultural land to housing, contrary to the priorities of the revised Carmel Valley Master Plan. The Monterey County Board of Supervisors certified the final Environmental Impact Report for the project on Dec. 11. The EIR finds that seven of the 31 proposed homesites lie within the 100-year floodplain. It suggests that leaving the land in agricultural use—denying the rezoning for the condominiums—should be the major mitigation measure. (George T.C. Smith photo)

Father Farrell's Wisdom

The first Christmas tree

By the REV. LARRY FARRELL

The Dec. 19 invocation delivered to the Carmel Rotary Club

Trees have played an important part in California history. The first recorded Christmas celebration was held under an oak on the shores of Monterey Bay 377 years ago by Don Sebastian Viscaino and the three Carmelite Padres who named Carmel. Under that same oak 178 years later in 1770, Padre Junipero Serra with Don Gaspar de Portola took possession of the West. And under pine boughs Serra celebrated Christmas and lit the Christmas lights which have not been extinguished to this day.

Another tree, the juniper, gave Padre Serra his Franciscan name. This fragrant tree and its aromatic wood is used as incense, to make hope chests and its berries are well known to Rotarians as they flavor genievre or gin (so much for pharmacopoeia).

Teach us, O Lord, to give with the true Christmas spirit as Serra gave bravely and unceasingly. We call you Lord, in Serra's name, to give us his kind of wisdom and with St. Paul may we say, "Rejoice again, I say Rejoice. Let everyone see how unselfish we are."

Finally, a word of caution. May we absorb the oil of juniper not only in a martini but in the fragrant incense of giving.

The White House Years—the memoirs of Henry Kissinger

Formulas of Middle East diplomacy

Part V—Middle East

(Editor's note: The first volume of Henry Kissinger's memoirs deals with his years as President Nixon's adviser on national security affairs. His key role in the shuttle diplomacy in the Middle East came later when he was appointed secretary of state. His early years in the Nixon administration, however, brought him into contact with Arab and Israeli leaders. He gives his impression of several of them in the fifth of seven excerpts from "White House Years.")

By HENRY KISSINGER

THE FIRST TIME I heard one of the staple formulas of Middle East diplomacy was at a dinner at the British Embassy in February 1969. Someone invoked the sacramental language of United Nations Security Council Resolution 242, mumbling about the need for a just and lasting peace within secure and recognized borders. I thought the phrase so platitudinous that I accused the speaker of pulling my leg. It was a mistake I was not to repeat.

The Middle East conflict has not lasted for thousands of years, as is often said. It is very much a product of our 20th century. The movements of Zionism and Arab nationalism, to be sure, were spawned in the late 1800s but they were not directed against each other. Only when the centuries of Ottoman rule had given way to the British Mandate, and the prospect of self-determination for Palestine emerged, did the Arab and the Jew, after having coexisted peacefully for generations, begin their moral struggle over the political future of this land.

By 1969, Israel had existed for 20 years unrecognized by its neighbors, harassed by guerrillas, assaulted in international forums, and squeezed by Arab economic boycott. Its very shape expressed the tenuous quality of its statehood; it was only nine miles wide at the narrowest point between the Mediterranean coast and the Jordan border; the main road between divided Jerusalem and Tel Aviv at some places was located less than a hundred yards from Arab outposts.

IN THE MIDDLE EAST, President Nixon made a distinction between my planning and my operational functions.

Because Nixon's distrust of the state department thrust me forward and inevitably embarrassed and frustrated Secretary of State William P. Rogers, Nixon constantly sought means to comfort his old friend. One was to reserve some area of foreign policy for Rogers' predominant influence.

He also suspected that my Jewish origin might cause me to lean too much toward Israel.

Israeli Ambassador Yitzhak Rabin had been a hero of Israel's war of independence and as chief of staff of Israel's defense forces he was an architect of the victory of the Six Day War. Except for his intelligence and tenacity, he was an unlikely ambassador.

Taciturn, shy, reflective, almost resentful of small talk, Rabin possessed few of the attributes commonly associated with diplomacy. Repetitious people bored him and the commonplace offended him; unfortunately for Rabin both these qualities are not exactly in short supply in Washington. He hated ambiguity, which is the stuff of diplomacy.

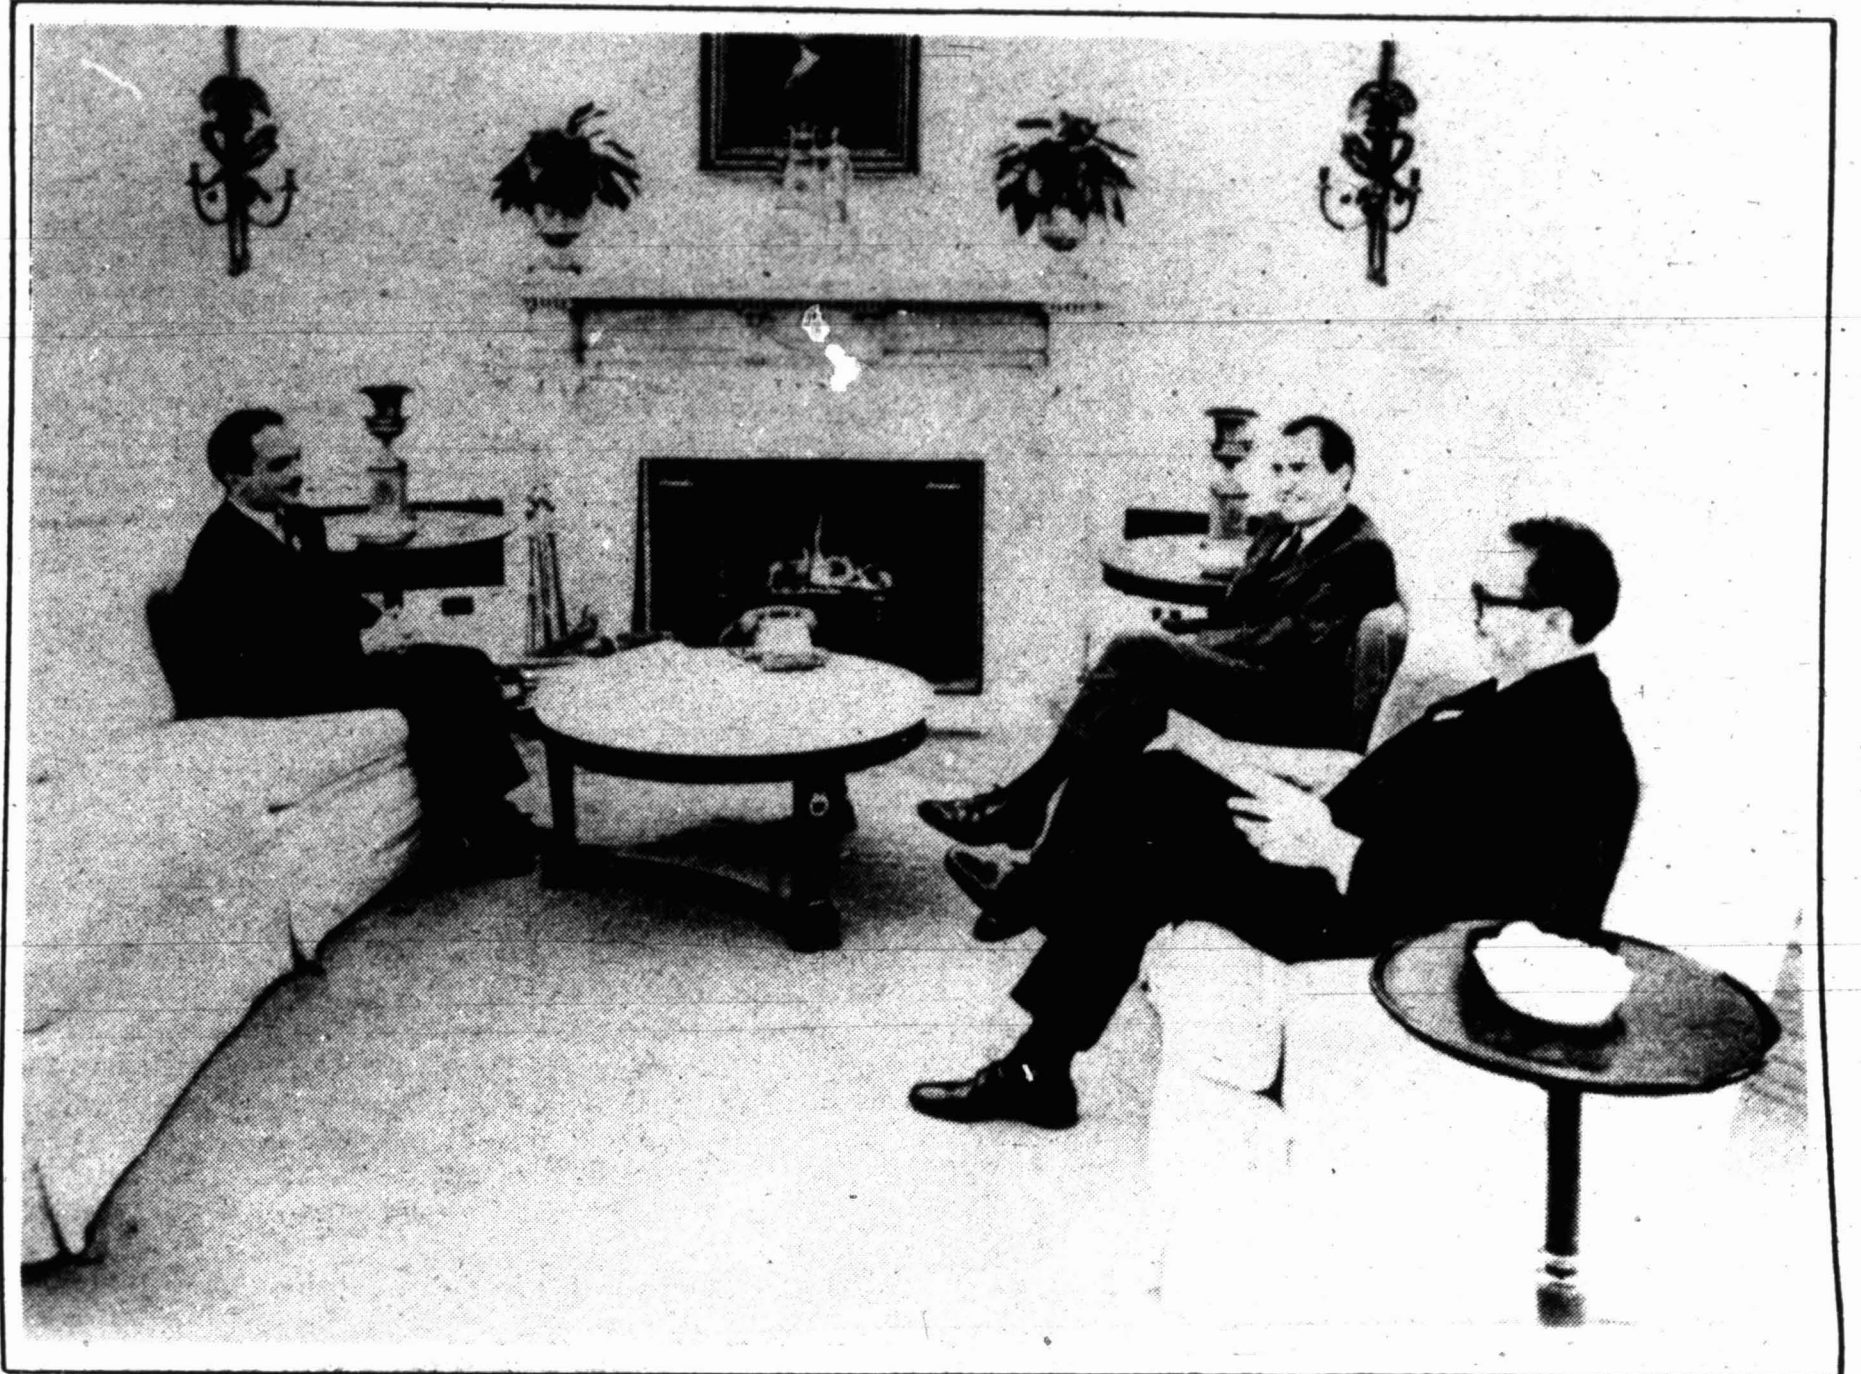

I grew extremely fond of him though he did little to encourage affection. His integrity and his analytical brilliance in cutting to the core of a problem were awesome. I valued his judgment.

ISRAELI FOREIGN MINISTER Abba Eban arrived in Washington in the middle of March for talks at the White House and State Department.

I have never encountered anyone who matched his command of the English language. Sentences poured forth in mellifluous constructions complicated enough to test the listener's intelligence and simultaneously leave him transfixed by the speaker's virtuosity. The prose flowed evenly, without high points, rustling along inexorably like a clear mountain stream.

To interrupt seemed almost unthinkable, for one knew that one would have to do so in an idiom that seemed barbaric by comparison. No American or British personality ever reminded me so acutely that English was for me, after all, an acquired language.

Eban's eloquence—unfortunately for those who had to negotiate with him—was allied to a first-class intelligence and fully professional grasp of diplomacy. He was always well

KING HUSSEIN of Jordan meets at the White House with President Nixon and Kissinger on April 8, 1969. Kissinger relates that Hussein was affectionately called "The Little prepared; he knew what he wanted. He practiced to the full his maxim that anything less than 100 percent agreement with Israel's point of view demonstrated lack of objectivity. Even a most sympathetic position—say 90 percent—was deplored as "erosion," "weakening," or "loss of nerve."

Mahmoud Fawzi, Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser's foreign affairs adviser, was a fine gentleman, a professional with the ingratiating manner of the educated Egyptian and the weary air of one who had seen much of man's foibles. Because I considered Egypt as a Soviet client state, I did not take advantage of establishing the closer human contact that the opportunity afforded. In the light of my later experience I have regretted this.

THE DOUGHTY KING HUSSEIN of Jordan never bargained about his friendship with the United States. Hussein was one of the most attractive political leaders I have met. The Little King—as he was affectionately called by our officials—stoutly defended the Arab cause even when his Arab brethren failed to reciprocate his loyalty.

Once I knew him reasonably well I could measure his irritation at what he considered insensitivity or bureaucratic pedantry by the heightening of his legendary courtesy; his use of the honorific "sir" would multiply while he assumed a glacial demeanor. (He, an hereditary monarch, called me "sir" even when I was a mere presidential assistant.)

He was as gallant as he was polite. Once he piloted my wife Nancy and me in his helicopter on a hair-raising ride at treetop level. To get him to fly higher, Nancy said innocently that she did not know helicopters could fly so low. The king assured her that they could fly lower still, making the rest of the trip almost on the deck. Had he exploited the opportunity he could have obtained my agreement to any political demand by promising to fly higher.

Hussein sought with dignity and courage to reconcile the roles of Arab nationalist and America's friend. A pro-Western monarch in the vortex of Arab radicalism, he maintained his independence as well as the respect of rulers in the region who were less than enchanted by the dynastic principle.

He was the first Arab leader prepared to talk of making peace with Israel, maintaining an intermittent if fruitless contact with Jerusalem. It was a misfortune that the strength of Hussein's bargaining position did not match his moderation and that his available options were not equal to his good will.

GOLDA MEIR CAME TO Washington on Sept. 25, 1969, on her first trip to the United States as Israeli prime minister. She was an original. Her childhood in the Russia of pogroms and her youth as a pioneer in the harshness of Palestine had taught her that only the wary are given the opportunity to survive and only those who fight succeed in that effort.

Her craggy face bore witness to the destiny of a people that had come to know too well the potentialities of man's inhumanity. Her watchful eyes made clear that she did not propose that those she led should suffer the same fate without a struggle. Yet she yearned to see her people realize their dream of peace; her occasionally sarcastic exterior never obscured a compassion that felt the death of every Israeli soldier as the loss of a member of her family.

Every inch of land for which Israel had fought was to her a token of her people's survival; it would be stubbornly defended against enemies; it would be given up only for a tangible guarantee of security. She had a penetrating mind, leavened by earthiness, and a mischievous sense of humor. She was not taken in by elevated rhetoric, or particularly interested in the finer points of negotiating tactics. She cut to the heart of the matter. She answered pomposity with irony and dominated conversations by her personality and shrewd psychology.

To me she acted as a benevolent aunt toward an especially favored nephew, so that even to admit the possibility of disagreement was a challenge to family hierarchy producing emotional outrage. It was usually calculated.

Mrs. Meir treated Rogers as if the reports of his views could not possibly be true; she was certain that once he had a chance to "explain" himself the misunderstandings caused by the inevitable inadequacy of reporting telegrams would vanish; she then promised forgiveness.

AS 1970 BEGAN, the gods of war were inspecting their armaments. The problems of the Middle East began increasingly to merge with the relations of the superpowers.

The perception of the State Department was that the root of our difficulties was the Arab-Israeli conflict over territory. Once that was resolved, the experts held, the influence of the radical Arabs would dwindle and with it the Soviet role in the Middle East.

My assessment was that Arab radicalism had five sources: Israel's conquests of territory; Israel's very existence; social and economic dissatisfactions; opposition to Western interests; and opposition to the Arab moderates. Only the first of these components would be affected by a settlement. The others would remain.

The end of 1970 was in a way a turning point in the Middle East, though we did not know it then. Perhaps the most decisive event was the death of Nasser and the accession to power of Anwar Sadat.

Anwar el-Sadat was then little known to us. A day after Nasser's death, a journalist asked me about Sadat. I said I thought he was an interim figure who would not last more than a few weeks. That was among my wildest misjudgments!

Over the course of 1971, Sadat would gradually outmaneuver his opponents, accomplishing in May a stunning purge of a formidable group of pro-Soviet rivals who had been plotting to eliminate him. Gradually he established his domestic position and his international freedom of action.

Few outsiders even then (certainly not I) understood with what courage, vision and determination he would later move his country and his region toward a revolution in international affairs, and thus emerge as one of the great leaders of our period.

Seventh Annual Christmas Race Sun. in Monterey Bay

Colorful sails will dot Monterey Bay when the Monterey Peninsula Yacht Club presents the seventh an-

The event is considered a fun race by the skippers and crews and a warm-up for the spring Perry Cup series which begins in February. Three classes of racing boats will compete: A, large boats 32 feet and longer; B, shorter sailing boats; and Shields, 30-foot one-design boats modeled after the America's Cup racing sloops though half the length.

The speed of the vessels is enhanced by the skillful piloting of experienced skippers and crews and by the use of spinakers.

The wine connoisseur

Italian wine tasting triggers pleasant memories

By Robert Lawrence Balzer

EVERY WINE LOVER has significant tasting memories, indelibly etched, which have served as educational blocks in building his delicate fortress of judgment.

One drop of wine upon the palate is sufficient to trigger that memory mechanism to instant reaction and comparative judging.

In 1951, I was privileged to be the luncheon guest of Barone Luigi Ricasole in the 15th-century turreted tower dining room of Brolio Castle in Tuscany.

Six vintages of classical Chianti had been opened for four of us to drink, wines covering 17 years between the oldest and the youngest. I remember being somewhat aghast at the number of wines and surprised that we consumed them all in the hours that followed, our appreciation rising, undiminished in perceptions, as the early springtime hours took the afternoon into fading light.

A 1931 BROLIO Chianti, so old that it was of an almost coppery hue, was the last in the series of pourings.

The purpose of the Barone's selections of wines was to prove that his wines could last and improve from years. The tall, severe nobleman, spoke of his wines as a general might speak of his finest crack regiments. His hands caressed the bowl of each glass, warming it to release those tender bouquets.

From that day forward, I would never think about Chianti without a deeper respect for this treasure of Tuscany, not as the humble red table wine for red-checked tablecloth service with spaghetti or pizza, but those finer bottlings, in Bordeaux-shaped, high-shouldered bottles, Classico Chiantis, worthy of special aging considerations.

I WAS NOT SURPRISED when Italian Trade Commissioner Dr. Lucio Caputo programmed a special tasting of "Old Vintage Wines of Italy" for the trade and wine media in New York and Beverly Hills. Ten winemakers from Piemonte, Lombardia, Toscana, Campania and Umbria brought some old wines, Barbera d'Asti, Valtellina, Inferno, Barolo, Chianti and Chianti Classico, Taurasi, Torgiano Rubesco and Brunello di Montalcino, and corresponding younger vintages of the same wines, none less than three years old.

To a great many present, most of the old wines were, like the 1945 Marchesi di Barolo Barolo, just simply too old. It was just plain over the hill, faded, and as someone said "aged almost to death." It had been kept in wood, we were told, for 15 years.

A 22-year-old Valtellina Superiore Inferno of 1957, on the contrary, aged in oak for five years, then bottled, had a persistent bouquet suggestive of wood roses and a remarkable freshness.

The Villa Antinori 1958 Chianti Classico, which the Marchese Piero Antinori said was "so hard, so unbalanced for the first eight or nine years of its life, it was almost consigned to the vinegar barrel, began to be drinkable after 15 years." It was what he called an "old style" wine, left long in the vats, aged six years in wood, then bottled. Today, it is soft, rich, long, velvet in the mouth, as legendary as those Brolio Chiantis of my memory.

BUT ALAS THERE is now a "new style" being made, aged in smaller Yugoslavian oak casks, like the 1975 we tasted, which will be ready to drink very soon, still fruity, clean and fresh, but with dubious lasting qualities.

Dr. Italo Folonari presented a 1955 Chianti Classico Riserva of Ruffino, which was also very vivid, of intense bouquet, and on its way to an even finer balance and a harmony of elements.

The 1974 wine seemed to have the same fine potentials.

Antonio Mastroberardino brought a 1958 Taurasi from his winery in Atripalda, Campania, which we anticipated with pleasure from previous experience with the wine in Italy. We were not disappointed. It was superb, all elements purring like a Rolls on the palate, perhaps the top wine of the evening. The 1974 will need time.

THERE IS NOT SPACE here to go into all 20 wines, but it is safe to say that many enjoyed the younger wines more than their aged counterparts. Which is just as well, because, to our surprise, some of those wines had been drawn from reserves, like the Pio Cesare 1953 Barolo, leaving only 10 bottles in the winery cellar.

So why bring them forth for this tasting? What was the purpose of the tasting exercise? Possibly to prove that Italian wines can age well? Most of us knew that already, and, alas, some of the wines were just too old to support that premise. Maybe, too, in a two-way communication, there was an attempt to find the American palate. As it is, the Italians are doing a pretty good job of it, their wines accounting for 53 percent of the imported wine market.

Sunset Views:

Appreciation, knowledge, skill are valuable tools for art collecting

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Affairs

OF COURSE THERE are the Rockefellers and the Hirshhorns in the magnificent world of art collectors. But for most of us with somewhat limited funds, acquisition depends more on developing reliable techniques and taste than on a fabulous bank account when it comes to collecting art to give or keep.

There are only three things you must have in order to collect with modest means — either for yourself or to give to others. These three are appreciation, knowledge, and skill.

When Gertrude Stein first saw a Picasso painting in Paris at a time when he was unknown and shy, she wasn't crazy about it but she had an open mind (and a smart brother, Leo, who probably knew more about painting than she did). She bought The Girl with a Basket of Flowers for $30, now one of the most valuable paintings of the 20th century. Stein was free of prejudice and open to new appreciations. She began what proved to be an enviable collection of Picassos that brought fame to the Spaniard as well as to Gertrude Stein.

Appreciation of art will inevitably bring into your collection for keeping or giving, a wide range of crafts, too.

Knowledge about art helps in collecting it for yourself or others. Tastes change, of course. Even professional collectors make mistakes at times, but knowledge helps the amateur in avoiding mistakes. Personal involvement in as many art areas as possible is, of course, the ideal background for would-be collectors. Painting in all media, potting, and mixing glazes and firing your own work, creating all types of prints (linocuts, woodblocks, lithographs, serigraphs, etchings, etc.), working with fabric and weaving — such personal experiences teach you more about judging art than a library full of textbooks although they have their places too.

Prints make ideal gifts and they are a great boon to the middle income collector. There is skill in discovering and buying good art for yourself or others. While it is thrilling to discover great crafts like papier mache in Kashmir and antiques in the flea market of Paris, it really isn't necessary to go far from home to collect for pleasant giving and keeping.

Now there are many art festivals and bazaars going on, and the galleries are full of collectible art. Shopping mall shows have given us occasional art finds at very reasonable prices. Art departments of local colleges and universities are training our future fine artists who are, even now, producing some excellent art and don't mind selling it at shockingly low prices.

Someone once wrote that "valuable art is more of a status symbol among movie celebrities than Bel Air mansions and Rolls Royces." Its status value is not a good reason to collect art or give it.

With expanding appreciation, knowledge, and skill combining it with a sincere love of art and a firm belief in your own judgment, you can have a wonderful life collecting and giving art for pleasure. Even on a budget.

So, since 'tis always the season to be looking for gifts, think of your family, friends, and others, and yourself, all those that you would like to please, and shop for art knowing you have something better than money alone can buy and that is good taste.

DURING THE MONTH of January, there will be a presentation of the works of Len Epstein in the Sunset Theater foyer.

Len Epstein was born in Philadelphia in 1933. His early years were spent a short distance from the Philadelphia Art Museum to which he was constantly drawn as a child. At an early age he was attending art classes at the Philadelphia Graphic Arts Club. However, his artistic talents did not find expression in paint until his late 30's. At that time he also began to write poetry.

While serving in the U.S. Air Force in the early 1950s, he was stationed on Guam and in California where he made his home after discharge from the service. He attended San Francisco State University and has a bachelor's degree in philosophy and a master's in humanities. He did further graduate work in English literature at Stanford University where he was awarded a teaching fellowship.

In 1961 he became a faculty member at Kansas State University and founded the University For Man at that institution in 1968. The Pacific Ocean called and he responded by accepting a position teaching humanities at Monterey Peninsula College. Soon after his arrival on the Peninsula, he created a West Coast branch of University For Man. Today, he continues to teach humanities courses at M.P.C. dealing with such topics as contemporary American culture, the city and wilderness, creativity and humanities, and the contemporary American male. His classes are taught in a living environment.

His childhood love of drawing and painting were reawakened in him by his desire to praise the beauties of the Central Coast in line and paint. First, Nancy Johnson, and then Reed Farrington, two Carmel artists, helped free this creative potential. Although his watercolor landscapes are highly praised, he feels his particular genius is most evident in his simple line drawings and cartoon-like commentaries as well as his abstract oriental-like "landscapes of the soul."

He describes his work in these words, "Each painting and each drawing that comes out of me is a unique experience, a special series of moments. Sometimes these moments extend over hours and even days, and all that comes out of me during that particular collection of moments has the stamp of that experience. If I have any style of painting or art, it is the style that can be discerned in that collection of moments for however long they exist. But all of my works, no matter how confusingly diverse they may seem to the casual eye, comprise my style."

Len Epstein lives in Carmel Valley with his wife and three children. The exhibition can be seen during any performance in the Sunset Theater by special arrangement with the director's office of Sunset Center.

LOOKING BACK on the past three years which seem to have gone by much too quickly, throughout which I have been given the knowledge and support of so many wonderful and generous people, I would like to use a quote from Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, "I can no other answer make but thanks and thanks, and ever thanks."

Have a joyous and prosperous New Year.

Al Geiberger will defend his title

Spaulding Invitational to be played January 2-5

Veteran golf professional Al Geiberger will head a field of 234 amateurs and 78 touring pros when he returns to defend his title at the $120,000 Spaulding Invitational Pro-Am to be played Wednesday through Saturday, Jan. 2-5 over four Peninsula golf courses.

Golfers will tee off from the first and 10th tees of Corral de Tierra, Old Del Monte and Spyglass Hill golf courses at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday through Friday. Only the professionals will play in the final rounds scheduled at 9 a.m. at Pebble Beach Golf Course on Saturday.

Among the professional golfers who will vie for Geiberger's title and the $22,500 top prize are former PGA champion Dave Stockton, two-time Spaulding winner Mark Pfeil, former champion Forrest Fezler, Jack Renner, who finished 14th on the money list in 1979 with $182,000, Larry Zeigler, Rod Funseth and Bob Wynn.

For the second consecutive year, top golfers from the Ladies Professional Golfers Association tour will pit their skills against those of the men. Beth Daniel and Jan Stephenson, two dynamic players from the LPGA, are among six women pros who have entered the tournament.

Daniel, recently named Rookie of the Year by both the LPGA and Golf Digest Magazine, was the winner of the Patty Berg Classic on the regular tour and the World

Ladies Championship, an international tournament played in Japan. The former two-time U.S. Women's Amateur champion, finished 10th on the money-winning list with earnings of $97,000.

Stephenson has been a consistent winner and a top finisher in the money-winning standings for many years. In 1979, she finished 15th on the money-winning list with earnings of $70,000.

Last year the Spaulding Pro-Am was won in a three-way playoff that pitted golfers from three generations against one another: Geiberger, veteran George Bayer and teenage amateur sensation Bob Clampett of Carmel Valley. A 25-foot birdie putt on the first hole of sudden death clinched the title.

Top prize money of $22,500 in the eighth annual tournament is a far cry from the $3,000 Rafe Botts won in the inaugural event. In just eight years the Monterey Kiwanis Club charity tournament has become the biggest event not on the regularly scheduled U.S. tour.

Passes good for all four days of the event are $10 and may be purchased at all Monterey Peninsula golf courses, Intersport at the Del Monte Center and Monterey Sport, 468 Alvarado St., Monterey. Single tickets, at $5, and $8 for the championship round at Pebble Beach, are available at the tournament sites on the day of play.

For further information, phone 649-6828.

Marine paintings in Carmel exhibit

An exhibit of marine paintings that depict the harbors and coastal dunes of Europe and America by Stephen Skerce may be viewed daily at the Anchor Gallery in Carmel Plaza, Carmel.

Sailing ships, fishing boats on the beach and afloat, shipyards and piers basking in the warm glow of dusk or shrouded by a blanket of fog are favorite subjects of the award-winning artist. Though his paintings are realistic, they hint at impressionism because, Skerce says, he believes the feeling of the painting is more important than photographic realism which leaves very little for the viewer to contribute.

Skerce, who began his studies at the Chicago Art Institute, completed his formal training at the Academie Julien in Paris, France. Moving to Carmel in 1972, he maintained two galleries in the village before moving to the San Francisco Bay Area where he now resides with his family. He is a member of the Society of Western Artists and has paintings in public and private collections throughout the world.

The works may be viewed from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. daily.

For additional information, phone 624-2425.

Art Strum receives D.A.R. award

Art Strum, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Strum of Carmel, has been selected for the D.A.R. Good Citizen Award. Each year the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution sponsors a contest for outstanding senior high school boys and girls' stressing the qualities of leadership, dependability, service and patriotism to an outstanding degree. Strum was awarded a pin and a certificate of award and is now eligible to enter the district competition.

Library films

Three films that illustrate the beauty of water birds, the hardness of Norwegian fjord farmers and the impact of the treadle invented by Leonardo da Vinci will be screened Thursday, Dec. 27 at the Monterey Peninsula Library, 625 Pacific St., Monterey. Everyone is welcome to attend the free program at 2:30 p.m.

The 65-minute show begins with Water Birds. Rare glimpses into the behavior of the graceful birds of seashores and marshlands are provided.

The perseverance of the Norwegian fjord farmer and his position in Norway's economy are illustrated in the film Norway—Change Comes to the Fjord. The camera focuses on an older man and his grandchildren who must contend with a harsh environment to survive.

Pedal Power is a light-hearted look at the history of pedal and treadle machines from their invention by da Vinci to their use on homesteads, in heart clinics and airplanes today.

For further information, phone 646-3930.

Black rolls 6-2. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

Dear Omar: Do you play rolls the same way on opening roll and when your opponent has made the opening move?—R.J., Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Dear R.J.: No. Your opponent's opening move can have a great bearing on how you play a move. Consider this position: White rolled 3-1 for his opening move and made the 5-point. Now you roll 6-2.

Had this been your opening roll, there are a number of ways to take it. The method I like is to bring a runner to the White bar-point for the 6, and to drop a man to the 11-point for the two. That would create action on both sides of the bar.

But once White has made his 5-point, I would play this roll differently. Bringing a man to the bar-point means that it is a favorite to get hit. On opening roll, you don't mind that; you will get lots of counterplay when you re-enter from the bar. However, once your opponent has made his 5-point, that is no longer true.

First, it is that much more difficult for you to come in off the bar—your opponent has a second key point in his home board. Secondly, there are a number of rolls that could be very awkward to play from the bar. And lastly, your opponent might not only hit, but he might hit and point.

Your opponent has started a blockade of your runners, so I would play the 6-2 as a running number, bringing a man to the 9-point. True, that still leaves a blot in White's outer board, but now White must roll a 4 to hit, and there are only 14 combinations that do so, while 22 combinations miss.

If White does hit, it is only 4-4 that allows him to point as well. If he does not hit, you will have thwarted part of his blockading tactics by escaping with one man.

REMEMBER WHEN?

50 Years Ago

From the "Carmel Pine Cone," Dec. 27, 1929

SHAKING UP THE PINE CONES

Recently Dr. R.J. Cluen gave the writer, Perry Newberry, some orders. For a long time, he said, there must be an easing of activities and an increase of rest. The gait of the past three years had been too swift, or too strenuous, or something and would have to be paid for with a protracted term of quietude.

Some writing, the whittling of wood blocks, and the less exciting parts of supervision of the Pine Cone's affairs would be permissible.

A reorganization of the Pine Cone office was required. There will be no let-down in the long fight to keep Carmel a distinctive village of artistic and intellectual superiority.

On Jan. 1, Bernard Rowntree will assume full charge of the Pine Cone's business management. Mrs. Daisy Bostick, who has been advertising manager for the past year, has resigned to return to her first love, the real estate business. The Pine Cone, and every advertiser and reader of the paper, will miss her, nor can the owners of the Pine Cone speak too highly in praise of her work and loyalty.

GIRL SCOUTS END YEAR DEBT FREE AND PEPFULL

Owing to that good American plan of getting things when they are needed and paying for them as they are enjoyed the Girl Scout House has been enjoyed for nearly a year and, thanks to the liberality of friends of the Scouts, the alterations, repairs, chimney and painting and furnishings are all paid for now before the end of the year.

If there are any Carmelites who have not looked into that attractive room "catty cornered" behind the library, they have missed seeing a lovely spot that hums like a beehive a good many hours each week.

WHALE MYSTERY CLEARED UP

Referring to article in your issue of Dec. 13 regarding the whale skeleton at Pt. Lobos—it need not be such a mystery. I was told by an old-timer that the dead whale washed ashore near the mouth of San Jose Creek but a San Francisco paper of April 14, 1901, gave the following account of it.

"The Japanese Whaling Co. of Pt. Lobos is setting up the skeleton of an enormous whale on a promontory overlooking the sea. The curiosity, when completed, will be the most conspicuous object in the entire landscape. The skeleton is 90 feet long and belonged to a finback whale captured near Pt. Lobos last winter."—L.S. Slevin.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

Names that Carmel calls its own with more or less reason are prominent in the world's news. The memory of Jack London was honored recently at a ceremony in Berlin. Upton Sinclair's books are being greatly read in Russia. The newly appointed executive committee of the National Parks Association at Washington, D.C., has upon it Duncan McDuffie and D. Vernon Kellogg.

MAYOR NAMES COUNCIL ACCOMPLISHMENTS

The important accomplishments of the Carmel City Council were listed by Mayor Horace Lyon in an interview last week.

"First and foremost," said the mayor, "I believe we accomplished a great deal about the weather during 1954 and I think the council should be congratulated since we are the ones responsible. Weatherwise, 1954 was the finest I can remember."

The pension plan for employees, even though it had to be placed on the ballot, is listed as a major accomplishment, the mayor said on the serious side.

He also pointed out that even though there was a certain amount of doubt concerning the purchase of a street sweeper, the majority of the merchants have stated that they now approve of the action and the result is that the business people are cooperating more than ever by keeping the sidewalks clean and neat in front of their establishments.

URANIUM STRIKE ON CHEWS RIDGE

Amateur and professional prospectors, toting Gieger counters and other uranium-detecting equipment, ranged over the rugged Chew's Ridge area of Los Padres Forest this week in what appears to be a small-scale but flourishing uranium rush.

Estimates of the number of prospectors currently engaged in the hunt for radioactive ore range from a few hundred to over 1,000. Over 20 mining claims have been filed with the county recorder since Dec. 2 when first reports of a strike in Los Padres came from a Fresno prospector.

The filing of claims on government-owned property, while entirely legitimate, has led to some concern over possible despoilation of Los Padres National Forest, one of the few wilderness areas on the West Coast. Though interest in the uranium rush is running high on the Peninsula, few people seemed to feel that a major strike with large-scale mining operations is in prospect.

FOOD COMES TO SPYGLASS HILL

It has often been said that if Spyglass Hill doesn't kill you, the lack of a place to eat will.

For the hungry hacker, California's number-one rated golf course was the resting place of the famished.

Skeleton Island was where he ran out of Hershey bars rather than golf balls, and Black Dog was what Nathan's Famous covered up with mustard.

At last food has come to Spyglass Hill.

Serving from the sunup to sundown the new Spyglass Grill offers complete breakfasts and lunch menus.

FIRST CITIZEN NAMED

Time really does stand still in Carmel-by-the-Sea. One can feel the lessening of tensions, the relaxed state of serenity when returning from the noisy uptight tempo of the cities.

Even our long white beach stretches out along a nicely protected bay, and the thought comes to mind that God must have meant Carmel when he designated one spot as the now paradise.

This is the first of a series of somewhat offbeat sketches about the fine citizens who have contributed to the present-day acceptance of Carmel. And who could be a better choice for our first article than our own First Citizen Hizzhonor the Mayor, Francesco Bernardo Ercole Luigi Laiolo better known as just Barney Laiolo.

Happy New Decade!

It isn't often we have a chance to wish you (and us) 10 whole years of peace, happiness and prosperity. We can, however, refrain from making long-range predictions — except for one: that Carmel will continue to be one of the most desirable places in the world to live.

This revelation comes not from a crystal ball nor from the real estate man's natural instinct to glorify the particular Eden in which he flourishes. It comes from history — a long line of decades in which the fortunes of Carmel have steadily increased.

The first man to spot this favored place was Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, 438 years ago, in 1542. In 1592, Sebastian Vizcaino named it "Carmel" after his patron saint. And in 1769, after Gaspar de Portola had discovered Carmel again (people are always doing that!), the first real settlement was established by Fathers Serra and Crespi in what we now know as Carmel Mission. All of these names are carefully preserved hereabouts.

In 1869, a scant 11 decades ago, history began to move faster. A Scot named John Martin acquired land and called it the Mission Ranch. A Frenchman named Honore Escolle bought what is now the north end of Carmel and, in 1888, sold it to a Dutchman named Duckworth for an embarrassing sum. The latter made the first map of Carmel, a straightforward program which was filled out in 1902 by Frank Devendorf and Frank Powers.

The rest of Carmel's history is too fresh to chronicle. Suffice to say that the visions of these pioneers were fleshed out by quaint cottages, charming homes, seaside villas. And that's the way we find it today — a limited area favored by nature where more houses are demanded than supplied.

So, now that we've had our brief history lesson, we come down to this new decade, the 1980s. We have one resolution: to take it one step at a time. Thus we wish you a Happy New Year (1980) and we'll think about 1981 when it comes around.
